CONTINUED.

All this might have passed as merely the natural pleasure which an elderly man might take in the society of an intelligent and handsome woman, but there were other points which seemed to Clara to give it a deeper meaning. She could not forget that when Charles Westmacott had spoken to her one night he had alluded to the possibility of his aunt marrying again. He must have known or noticed something before he would speak upon such a subject. And then again Mrs. Westacott had herself said that she hoped to change her style of living shortly and take over completely new duties. What could that mean except that she expected to marry? And whom? She seemed to see few friends outside their own little circle. She must have alluded to her father. It was a hateful thought, and yet it must be faced.

One evening the doctor had been rather late at his neighbor's. He used to go into the admiral's after dinner, but now he turned more frequently in the other direction. When he returned, Clara was sitting alone in the drawing room reading a magazine. She sprang up as he entered, pushed forward his chair and ran to fetch his slippers.

"You are looking a little pale, dear," he remarked.

"Oh, no, papa; I am very well."

"All well with Harold?"

"Yes. His partner, Mr. Pearson, is still away, and he is doing all the work."

"Well done. He is sure to succeed. Where is Ida?"

"In her room, I think."

"She was with Charles Westmacott on the lawn not very long ago. He seems very fond of her. He is not very bright, but I think he will make her a good husband."

"I am sure of it, papa. He is very manly and reliable."

"Yes, I should think that he is not the sort of man who goes wrong. There is nothing hidden about him. As to his brightness, it really does not matter, for his aunt, Mrs. Westmacott, is very rich—much richer than you would think from her style of living—and she has made him a handsome provision."

"I am glad of that."

"It is between ourselves. I am her trustee, and so I know something of her arrangements. And when are you going to marry, Clara?"

"Oh, papa, not for some time yet. We have not thought of a date."

"Well, really, I don't know that there is any reason for delay. He has a competence, and it increases yearly. As long as you are quite certain that your mind is made up"——

"Oh, papa!"

"Well, then, I really do not know why there should be any delay. And Ida, too, must be married within the next few months. Now, what I want to know is what I am to do when my two little companions run away from me." He spoke lightly, but his eyes were grave as he looked questioningly at his daughter.

"Dear papa, you shall not be alone. It will be years before Harold and I think of marrying, and when we do you must come and live with us."

"No, no, dear. I know that you mean what you say, but I have seen something of the world, and I know that such arrangements never answer. There cannot be two masters in a house, and yet at my age my freedom is very necessary to me."

"But you would be completely free."

"No, dear, you cannot be that if you are a guest in another man's house. Can you suggest no other alternative?"

"That we remain with you."

"No, no. That is out of the question. Mrs. Westmacott herself says that a woman's first duty is to marry. Marriage, however, should be an equal partnership, as she points out. I should wish you both to marry, but still I should like a suggestion from you, Clara, as to what I should do."

"But there is no hurry, papa. Let us wait. I do not intend to marry yet."

Dr. Walker looked disappointed. "Well, Clara, if you can suggest nothing, I suppose that I must take the initiative myself," said he.

"Then what do you propose, papa?" She braced herself as one who sees the blow which is about to fall.

He looked at her and hesitated. "How like your poor dear mother you are, Clara," he cried. "As I looked at you then it was as if she had come back from the grave." He stooped toward her and kissed her. "There, run away to your sister, my dear, and do not trouble yourself about me. Nothing is settled yet, but you will find that all will come right."

Clara went up stairs sad at heart, for she was sure now that what she had feared was indeed about to come to pass, and that her father was going to ask Mrs. Westmacott to be his wife. In her pure and earnest mind her mother's memory was enshrined as that of a saint, and the thought that any one should take her place seemed a terrible desecration. Even worse, however, did this marriage appear when looked at from the point of view of her father's future.

The widow might fascinate him by her knowledge of the world, her dash, her strength, her unconventionality—all these qualities Clara was willing to allow her—but she was convinced that she would be unendurable as a life companion. She had come to an age when habits are not lightly to be changed, nor was she a woman who was at all likely to attempt to change them. How would a sensitive man like her father stand the constant strain of such a wife, a woman who was all decision, with no softness and nothing soothing in her nature?

It passed as a mere eccentricity when they heard of her stout drinking, her cigarette smoking, her occasional whiffs at a long clay pipe, her horsewhipping of a drunken servant and her companionship with the snake Eliza, whom she was in the habit of bearing about in her pocket. All this would become unendurable to her father when his first infatuation was past. For his own sake, then, as well as for her mother's memory, this match must be prevented. And yet how powerless she was to prevent it! What could she do? Could Harold aid her? Perhaps. Or Ida? At least she would tell her sister and see what she could suggest.

Ida was in her boudoir, a tiny little tapestried room, as neat and dainty as herself, with low walls hung with Imari plaques and with pretty little Swiss brackets bearing blue Kaga ware or the pure white Coalport china. In a low chair beneath a red shaded standing lamp sat Ida in a diaphanous evening dress of mousseline de soie, the ruddy light tinging her sweet childlike face and glowing on her golden curls. She sprang up as her sister entered and threw her arms around her.

She pushed forward his chair and ran to fetch his slippers.

"Dear old Clara! Come and sit down here beside me. I have not had a chat for days. But, oh, what a troubled face! What is it then?" She put up her forefinger and smoothed her sister's brow with it.

Clara pulled up a stool, and sitting down beside her sister passed her arm round her waist. "I am so sorry to trouble you, dear Ida," she said, "but I do not know what to do."

"There's nothing the matter with Harold?"

"Oh, no, Ida."

"Nor with my Charles?"

"No, no."

Ida gave a sigh of relief. "You quite frightened me, dear," said she. "You can't think how solemn you look. What is it, then?"

"I believe that papa intends to ask Mrs. Westmacott to marry him."

Ida burst out laughing. "What can have put such a notion into your head, Clara?"

What Tradition Tells Us About the Ambitious City.

LA SALLE AND HIS VOYAGEURS.

The First White Men to Set Foot Upon Where Now Stands the Flourishing City of Hamilton.

ANOTHER STORY BUT NOT TRADITIONAL.

It Comes From One Who Was Restored to Life

MR. JOHN R. LONG.

Tradition tells us that the first white men to set foot upon where now stands the flourishing city of Hamilton, were La Salle and his voyageurs, who explored the head waters of Lake Ontario in 1669, when the "forest primeval" was in an unbroken state, and the red man in undisturbed possession. The first authentic record of the location of a white settlement on the present city's site, gives the name of Robt. Land as the pioneer, and the date as 1778. It is often difficult to verify traditional history; but from what we know of this particular section of Canada we are inclined to accept the story as handed down to us.

In this issue of our paper we are permitted (for the benefit of our readers) to give in a condensed form a wonderful history or story as related by a gentleman well and favorably known in Hamilton and in many other cities and towns of Ontario.

Mr. John R. Long, of 19 Burlington Street West, Hamilton, is a gentleman who has come very prominently before Hamiltonians this year as the publisher of the first Guide Book ever issued for the purpose of advertising the "Ambitious City." In this work Mr. Long has scored an immense success, and given such a degree of satisfaction, that he has been prevailed upon to publish an enlarged addition in May of the present year.

Now for Mr. Long's interesting story, true in every particular and detail, and related with a view of benefiting thousands in every section of this broad Dominion. We may remark that this brief story has a special reference to a critical period in Mr. Long's life; it refers to a time when his life was in danger and despaired of; when all hope and deliverance seemed to vanish; when the grim reaper stood ready with outstretched arms to claim his life.

From Mr. Long's letter we give the following extracts:—"I was so terribly afflicted with dyspepsia that I came near dying. When sick with this awful disease I had constantly a heavy load on my stomach, which was as sore as a boil. I was continually gasping for breath, sick all over, my system and mind run low, my kidneys were out of order, pains everywhere, costive, always tired and weak, indeed so weak at intervals that I had to leave my duties to rest; and, as a consequence, I lost my situation, a light but responsible one. I could not sleep at nights. I rarely ate anything though always hungry, and what little I did eat nearly drove me crazy. I had no desire for life in this condition. Those around me often spoke of me and wondered how I lived. Several different advertised medicines were recommended to me and tried, but with no beneficial results; I was simply throwing money away. Finally, I resolved to try Paine's Celery Compound, which was the last medicine I had decided to buy, as I was tired of trying so many. After taking nearly two bottles of this wonderful Paine's celery compound, I began to feel improved, and regained color and flesh. I continued its use for five months, taking five bottles, and at the end of that time I was completely cured, and have never been sick since. When I commenced with Paine's celery compound I weighed 123 pounds, at the end of five months, I had gained 20 pounds, a pound a week, and now weigh 143 pounds, the most I ever weighed in my life; and the result is, that to-day I am strong, healthy and vigorous as any man, and enjoy my regular meals. Before life was a burden to me, I was always cross and cranky, and enjoyed no pleasure as others could, and was in a melancholy mood, and people around me often heard me remark "I was tired of living." To-day, I thank God and the maker of Paine's celery compound that I am freed from trouble, that I enjoy life, and have a desire to live long. I am cured of that horrible and life-ruining disease, and I testify to the merit of Paine's celery compound, because I know there are hundred of cases like mine; and I trust this testimony may fall into the hands of many suffering men and women. Every word I have written is God's truth, and can be vouched for by those who know of my case."

What a history of suffering! What a wonderful history of cure! Can the records of the many common advertised medicines of our day furnish proof like Mr. Long's? No other can do so reader; it is only Paine's celery compound that can give satisfaction, relief and cure. If Mr. Long had continued with the medicines that aggravate his troubles, he would not have lived to publish his handsome and valuable Guide Book. There is a warning here to all who are sick and diseased that should not be unheeded. When you are about to purchase medicine, do not allow the dealer to persuade you to take something else instead of Paine's celery compound. The something else is for the seller's advantage, not for your good. Demand Paine's celery compound; be firm in your demand; insist upon getting what you ask for, as your very life and existence depends upon the best—that which has saved others.

Mrs. DeWet—"There, Reginald, are those Rigby Waterproofs I have been telling you about. Can't you see how stylish and comfortable they look?—and they are just lovely for winter weather. You always wait till everybody else in the world adopts a new thing before you will believe in it. We really must have them at once."

Mrs. Uptodate—"Dear me, what a sight those DeWets are, out on the streets a day like this without Rigby Garments. It takes some people a lifetime to learn how to be comfortable. Just think how we used to swelter in those horrid Rubber Waterproofs, and such smelling things."

Don't Stuff a Cold.

If you do you will nine times in ten, have a fever to starve.

A cold is a shock received by the myriad nerves that bristle near the surface of a human body. This shock is transmitted to the nerve centres, and then back to the mucous membrances, forcing a great amount of blood to those membrances, creating a more or less severe irritation and consequent rise in the temperature, followed by chills. Excess of food in the stomach still more increases the temperature, and, worst of all, helps clog secretions or natural outlets of the body. It is high time we broke away from an old notion which, like some others, has done more harm than good. For example, in years past how many poor fever sufferers, burning with internal fire and thirst, were hurried to an untimely grave because not allowed cooling drinks or a bit of ice by the old time treatment for fevers as foolish as the adage for colds. At last one cunning delirious patient got to a pump of cold water and drank his fill; detemined no to leave till the well ran dry, he slacked the fever, recovered, and doctors learned a lesson. Experimenting with a severe cold is a dangerous custom, as most persons try one remedy only untill some friend suggests another "sure cure," as Mark Twain so humorously describes. When light hoarseness or tightening of the nase membranes warns one of a skin exposure or chill from wet, act promptly; a delay dangerous. With children it may mean croup and strangulation with adults, catarrh, bronchitis, perhaps pneumonia. If neglected, nothing can prevent the sneezing, red nose, and woe-begone look of a person with a cold. Scores of mothers would as soon go to bed without matches in the house, as without that old fashioned remedy, Johnson's Anodyne Liniment, near at hand for croupy children. Used with a mild laxative, as described in a pamphlet which I. S. Johnson and Co., Boston, Mass., will send free to anyone, Johnson's Liniment will cure a cold for aduults quicker than any known remedy. A mild nutritious diet, a gentle physic to open the secretions, and a bottle of that old Anodyne from your druggist, will conquer any cold. Johnson's Anodyne Liniment was originated by an old family physician more than seventy years ago.

GRATEFUL PLEASING RELIEF AFTER MANY DAYS.

How a Queens County Man Found Permanent Healing.

His Own Experience Tells Fully and Freely some Truths which all Readers of this Paper Should Know.

Here and there, in almost every town of our province, are "chronic" cases over which doctors disagree; cases that become worse year after year. It is to reach such that the gentleman to whom these lines refer, and whose portrait is here given, has written the story of his case.

Mr. Branscomb's home is in Chipman, Queens Co., N B It was there that a representative of the Groder company called upon him, Sept 1st, of the present year His greeting was most cordial He gladly acknowledged his thanks, giving expression to the following statement:

"It is five years since I became afflicted with a form of indigestion Last winter it became more severe, developing into chronic diarrhœa I cannot tell you how much I suffered for SIX LONG WEEKS. It seemed as though relief could not be found You will remember how I told you of my condition and asked your advice about taking a bottle of GRODER'S SYRUP You told me that the medicine was a laxative and might not meet my needs. I delayed buying for a few hours until I began to hope that it would help me. Even my clothes seemed a burden because of bloating of stomach It was with difficult that I kept about sufficiently to attend to my business.

But I am a well man now from the use of your remedy In three days after I bought GRODER'S SYRUP the terrible pain and distress across my stomach were removed. My bowels rapidly assumed a natural, healthy condition. Now I eat and drink as well as I ever could I have gained constantly in flesh since March last. I am perfectly cured

It seems a duty for me to state my case fully, that others who suffer as I did may know where to find a cure."

Truly yours,

E. A. BRANSCOMB.
