FEEDING HORSES ON OLD POTATOES

It would appear that there is something more than a modicum of danger in feeding old potatoes to horses. Some time ago we referred to the mysterious deaths of twelve horses owned by Mr. A. D. Wells, Baker Farm, Wallingford. At the time the deaths were shrouded in mystery, but at last a ray of light has been shed upon the cause, which should act as a warning to farmers and others similarly situated. In a great many parts of the country the feeding of potatoes is a common, and we believe wholesome enough, practice. But if these potatoes are stale, and merely used up for food because they cannot profitably be sold, then there is a certain amount of danger incurred by the use. Mr. Wells fed his horses on boiled barley, beans, and potatoes twelve months old. The deaths could not be attributed to poisoning in the ordinary, nor could they be traced to the beans or barley. Prof. McFadyen, however, conducted an experiment with an old colt horse at the Royal Veterinary College, and his investigations clearly established the complicity of the potatoes as the cause of death. When boiled, the potatoes easily broke in two, and occasionally turned color. It will therefore be wise policy on the part of farmers to clearly comprehend the condition of the potatoes they wish to feed to their horses and feed moderately.—Farmer and Stock Breeder, London, Eng.

More Beautiful. A doctrine lived is more beautiful than a doctrine preached. Jesus taught His disciples to forgive men their trespasses, and that was beautiful; but when upon the cross He prayed, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do," that was sublime. If we are not all called to preach, we are at least called to adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things, and that is better than mere preaching.
