STUDENTS & CLUBS

If you don't like fencing or going to French or Spanish club meetings and even if you do happen to like speaking Spanish or French there are a number of clubs besides these you can go to. There are clubs to please everybody no matter what your preferences. In the lines following I will give a rundown for those who have not already researched the clubs for themselves.

Charlottetown has three clubs for young people (18 -) if you want to dance. Each of these three clubs has a somewhat different crowd.

The Granada on Kent Street is the only club in the city which has regular live entertainment. Thus, it has a cover charge which eliminates it right there for some students. The Granada crowd is composed of a lot of young workers, and a core of regulars. The average age in the Granada tends to run between 24 - 26 with a number under and a number over (usually more over than under). The groups which play at the Granada tend to be very light musically often leaning toward country music. Very seldom is there what you could even think of calling a rock group playing there.

Gentlemen Jim's on University Avenue is one of the two local discotheques. GJ's is the favorite of the two as far as students are concerned. The music at GJ's is usually better than at the Jolly Knight depending on who is in the booth.

The Jolly Knight on Kent Street is yet another story. The Jolly Knight seems to be a bit on the heavy side as far as the crowds are concerned. There are a lot of street people, wanderers, and regulars. The crowd tends to be younger than the other two clubs. The Jolly Knight tends to be a lot wilder and greasier than the other clubs in town. So, if that's your style, help yourself.

The Prince Edward Room has live entertainment but it attracts few students to the best of my knowledge.

The clubs have prices at basically the same level. Exorbitant. There is however a student night when prices are merely outrageous. GJ's have a student night on Monday. The Jolly Knight has a student night on Wednesday - bring your boxing gloves.

Outside of clubs with records or live entertainment there are a number of lounges. These are usually nice quiet places to relax and talk over a drink if you want to hear what you're saying.

The Tudor Room at the Charlottetown Hotel is quite nice, big, comfortable and roomy with highly decorated ceilings - very tasteful. My personal favorite does not draw young people although the number of young people under 25 who frequent the establishment has increased in the last year or two. I highly recommend it, and don't ask "Who is he to recommend?"

The Gallows in the Inn on the Hill is quite nice, very comfortable but not very big and too well lit.

(We don't have a romantic atmosphere type club in the whole bloody city though one night at GJ's, during a power failure they put candles on the tables and it became quite tacky). Try the house drink - it's a knock-out.

The Tack Room is another small but quite comfortable lounge located in the Islander Motor Lodge. A nice place to talk. The Tack Room is a favorite for after hockey game drinking.

The Smuggler's Jug at Confederation Inn is a very nice place done in pub type decor with a larger drinking area than the previous two. The place has a really nice feeling. Go and drink.

If you want to eat while you drink, the Canton has the best Chinese and Canadian food in town and very good service.

Don't sit in your room like a brick if you've done your work and have nothing to do. Go to a lounge or a club and have a drink or a meal and meet some people. This isn't Toronto - if you smile and say hello you don't get weird looks from people.

I have a good time and I'm very hard to please. You too can have a good time here if you know what you want and where to go.
