Churchmen To Delve Into Aspects Of Norman Case

NEW YOR K(CP)—Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, president of the National Council of Churches, said Monday the situation surrounding the death of E. Herbert Norman, Canadian Ambassador to Egypt, will be brought to the attention of the council's general board at its meeting May 1 in Chicago.

Norman leaped to his death from a building in Cairo April 4 after a U.S. Senate internal security sub-committee earlier had revived charges that linked his name to communism.

Dr. Blake, in his statement, said indignation voiced earlier by Canadian churchmen was "understandable." He said the National Council of Churches in the past had spoken out against "unjust procedures of congressional committees."

In a statement released earlier in Toronto, Dr. Ernest K. Long, secretary of the general council of the United Church in Canada, called on the national council of churches "to stir the conscience of its countrymen" in an effort to discourage the process of "assassinating the characters of innocent men."

The council of churches said Dr. Blake's statement Monday has been passed on to the Canadian Council of Churches in Toronto.

Dean James A. Pike of the New York Cathedral (St. John the Divine) Sunday accused the U.S. Senate internal security sub-committee of "assassination by insinuation" in the suicide of Norman.

Dean Pike, in a sermon, compared the Senate sub - committee with the Sanhedrin, the ancient Jewish committee that condemned Christ to death.

In Washington Senator Richard L. Neuberger (Dem.-Ore.) Monday renewed on the Senate floor his request for a special inquiry into the publication of charges about Norman.

The Senator first made the suggestion in a statement last Friday, the day after Norman committed suicide in Cairo.

Neuberger said in his brief floor speech that the circumstances of Norman's death had "cast a shadow over the traditionally close and friendly mutual relations of the United States and Canada."

"I have felt a sense of concern and responsibility over the possibility that action by one of our Senate sub-committees may have played a role in this potential weakening of our close ties of mutual friendship and confidence.

"Nor, apparently, is the role of the department of state, in the episode of the disclosure of the controversial testimony in question, wholly beyond criticism."

Senator Theodore Green (Dem. R.I.), chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, Monday expressed his "deep regret" at the death of Norman.

In a letter to Canadian Ambassador Arnold Heeney, Green wrote that indications that Norman's death "may have been attributable to unfortunate publicity arising from activities in connection with the work of the Senate lead me to express my deep regret to the Canadian government and to the Norman family."

"The burdens imposed on your foreign minister, Mr. L. B. Pearson, and your government's representatives in Egypt and elsewhere have been most heavy. The people of the United States are not unmindful of the fact that during the trying days of crisis in the Middle East your government has been a world leader in preserving peace."

Americans for Democratic Action proposed Monday that Robert Morris be fired as counsel for the Senate internal security sub-committee. ADA accused him of "mischievous bungling of the Norman case."

The accusation was sent by Robert A. Nathan, ADA national chairman, to Senator Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, the Democratic leader.

Nathan said that by airing charges that Norman had Communist connections the committee counsel "has done more to weaken the security of the United States than all his investigations could ever repair."

Start Collection To Aid Eden

LONDON (AP) — The Daily Sketch started a public collection today to pay the medical bills of former prime minister Eden, who is recovering from an operation in Boston.

The collection was begun after two other newspapers, the News Chronicle and the Daily Mail, appealed to the government to pay the bills. Both papers said Eden would find U.S. medical costs a severe strain on this moderate income.

Opening lead— queen of diamonds.

My theory is fortified by th is example hand which I have used many times with pupils who are about average in skill, but who more often than not fail to play the four heart contract correctly.

The play usually goes like this. Declarer wins the diamond lead with the ace, crosses to dummy with a spade, and leads the jack of hearts, losing the finesse to West.

Back comes the jack of diamonds which holds the trick, followed by a spade which is won in dummy. Trumps are then drawn and the ace of clubs is forced out. When East takes the ace he also takes with it the queen of spades, and declarer is down one.

All the time declarer had a practically sure thing for four hearts. He should not have bothered with the heart finesse.

After winning the opening lead, trumps should be immediately attacked to force out the kink. The spade position should not be weakened for the purpose of taking a finesse which is not vital to the contract.

In the actual hand, West would win the second heart lead, cash a diamond and presumably lead a spade. South wins with the King, draws the outstanding trump, and then concedes a trick to the ace of clubs. Declarer's spade loser is discarded on one of dummy's good clubs.

Nothing could be simpler, as we said, But many players find the opportunity to finesse an irresistible temptation.

BEDTIME STORIES

The Ground Moves

Remember there's a cause for all. That happens, great events or small.

-Old Mother Nature.

"Look!" cried Welcome Robin to Mrs. Robin. They were over in Farmer Brown's dooryard.

"What shall I look at?" Mrs. Welcome wanted to know.

"The ground over there," replied Welcome Robin.

"Well, what about the ground?" demanded Mrs. Welcome.

"Can't you see what's happening It's moving!" cried Welcome Robin.

What do you suppose he is doing down there?" said Mrs. Welcome.

Then Mrs. Welcome did see. The ground really was moving. Right in that particular place the ground was being pushed up. Anyway, that is how it looked. It seemed as if something underneath something or somebody they couldn't see, was underneath the grass-roots and pushing the ground up.

"What do you suppose is doing that?" asked Mrs. Welcome.

"Have you forgotten an old acquaintance of ours?" Welcome Robin wanted to know.

For a moment Mrs. Welcome Robin looked puzzled. Then she knew who it was Welcome had in mind. "Do you mean Miner the Mole?" she cried.

Welcome Robin nodded. "Of course," said he, "who else could I mean?"

"We haven't seen him since last summer," said Mrs. Welcome.

"And we don't see him now," chuckled Welcome. "but just the same we know he is right down there."

For a few moments Welcome and Mrs. Welcome watched the ground. It didn't move. They began to wonder if Miner really was at work down there. Then once more the ground began to move. It pushed up in a little ridge. Then it stopped moving again.

"What do you suppose he is doing down there?" said Mrs. Welcome?

"He is looking for something to eat if you ask me," said Welcome Robin.

"I suppose you mean worms," said Mrs. Welcome.

"Of course, Do you know of anything better?" Welcome replied.

Mrs. Welcome shook her head. "If I could have all the worms I want I wouldn't want anything else," said she. Then she added, "I wonder how in the world he finds them down in the ground. How can he see them?"

"He can't see them. Of course he can't. Nobody could see down in the ground where he lives. It must be perfectly dark there and I guess no one can see in complete darkness. Some folks seem to think that he hasn't any eyes, but he has. They are so small I guess they are not of much use. But living in he ground as he does he can't have much use for eyes," said Welcome.

"Then how does he find those worms?" cried Mrs. Welcome.

"Perhaps the same way we find them. You know most of the time we don't see them until we pull them out of the ground," said Welcome.

"You mean he hears them?" asked Mrs. Welcome.

"Why not? We do," replied Welcome.

Just then the ground began to move again.
