STARTLING PILL STATISTICS.

The British appetite for pills can only be gauged from the revenue receipts relating to the stamp duties paid for patent medicines—which last year in the aggregate amounted to almost £250,000—and by making allowances for the pills dispensed by doctors and chemists, which are not dutiable.
An allowance of a trifle over half an ounce of pills for each inhabitant of the United Kingdom for the year cannot be said to be an extravagant estimate. Indeed such an allowance means but 32 doses a year, or 1½ pounds of pills to last a lifetime of 60 years.
Placed in a straight line the pills of a lifetime would extend through some 40 feet, and there would be some 1,920 of them. The latter figure may seem rather large, but if 60 years of pills were combined into one sphere it would have a diameter of less than four inches and a circumference of under one foot.
It is not until we make calculations regarding the pill as a national delicacy that we arrive at any figures of magnitude, and then we find that something like 1,280,000 pills are swallowed annually. If these British pills were put in a straight line, they would extend from London to Lucknow.
The placing of the pills in a lengthy line of 5,050 miles would afford occupation for a pair of idle hands during 81 years, at the end of which time the owner of the hands would probably find the task of laying down three pills every second during an eight hours' day somewhat monotonous. If, in place of putting them into an extended line, we placed the pills in rows of 1,085 pills, and having arranged the same number of rows as there were pills in a row as a base, we could use the rest of the pills in making 1,085 similar layers, the resultant cube would have each of its dimensions rather more than 22½ feet.
Having performed this feat, we could proceed to stir up the lot in a gigantic mortar, and having thoroughly mixed the ingredients—and what a mixture it would be—roll the mass into one splendid spherical pill weighing 637 tons, and possessing a diameter of over 28 feet and a circumference of over 88 feet. Five men, 6 feet in height, standing on one another's shoulders—not heads, that would be too painful, especially for the one on the ground—would require the services of a small boy to crown the human Eiffel tower in order to get level with the top of the monster pill.—London Correspondence.

LABORATORY OF INLAND REVENUE,
Office of Official Analyst,
Montreal, July 28, 1898.
I, JOHN BAKER EDWARDS, do hereby certify that I have duly analyzed and tested several samples of "Abbey's Effervescent Salt," some being furnished by the manufacturers in Montreal and others purchased from retail druggists in this city. I find these to be of very uniform character and composition, and sold in packages well adapted to the preservation of the Salt. This compound contains saline bases which form "Fruit Salts" when water is added—and is then a very delightful aperient beverage, highly palatable and effective.
Abbey's Effervescent Salt contains no ingredient of an injurious or unwholesome character, and may be taken freely as a beverage.
(Signed,) JOHN BAKER EDWARDS,

FIRST NIGHT IN A "SLEEPER"
A traveler from the short grass country boarded No. 1 at Dodge City a few nights ago. He wore long white whiskers and a wide brimmed white felt hat, and he stood 6 feet 6 inches.
His boots were neatly blacked, and he had on a new suit of clothes. It was apparent that he was not at home in his new toggery. He was going to California, he explained, to visit his oldest son, who was a prosperous fruit raiser on the coast. He had engaged a berth in the Pullman, and he asked the conductor where it was.
"Right here, sir," said the conductor as he pointed out the section.
"Do you sleep in it that way, all curled up on a seat?" he asked in amazement.
"No; it will be made up when you are ready to retire."
The man did not exactly know what "made up" meant, but he asked no more questions. He sat in the drawing room and smoked, and finally he said to the conductor:
"Well, guess I'll turn in."
"All right, sir. Your berth is made up."
The man walked into the main part of the car. Then he went back to the drawing room.
"They all look alike," he said. "You will have to show me mine."
The conductor showed him to his berth and left him. The man looked at it. Then he went back to the rear platform of the car and closed the door. In a few minutes he stuck his head in the car and shouted:
"Look out, I'm coming," and he made a run for his berth with his clothes, or most of them, under his arm. In the morning he stuck his head out between the curtains and called the conductor.
"How in thunder am I going to get out on the platform to dress with all these people looking?"
The conductor explained to him that he would have to dress in the berth. He did so, but it took him two hours.—Topeka Capital.

Japanese Imitation.
The Japanese are almost universally condemned by writers for the imitation practiced by them of late years of western literature, art, science and invention, and yet this imitation seems natural and right. Imagine, if possible, the nation of Japan leaping across the civilization of hundreds of years in half a century! Think of her emerging from the darkness of the middle ages and standing suddenly forth in the light of the nineteenth century! Would it not have been worse than madness for her to have said: "This new civilization is better than ours, yet we will not imitate it? We will retain our originality and perhaps in ages to come we shall reach the enlightened state now enjoyed by the rest of the world."
But fortunately the Japanese did not say this, but gave themselves up to the acquisition of the wonderful stores of knowledge opened to them.—Lippincott's.

Triple Jointed Names.
The Boston Record narrates an incident which occurred when Associate Justice Gray of the United States supreme court was chief justice of the Massachusetts court. One of the savings banks which had suspended was before the court, and the question was in reference to the appointment of a receiver. The gentleman whose name was proposed rejoiced in one of those triple jointed names which were never liked by Judge Gray. In filling out the decree Judge Gray wrote, "Let ——— Smith act as receiver." Then, turning the decree over to the counsel, he said, "You may fill in the rest of the alphabet."
