Memo from your Master Feeds Dealer - You'll get less than full production if you neglect the dry cow.

Good dairymen say that profitable milk production starts with the proper feeding of the dry cow.

One way to make sure that the cow gets adequate nutrients for her own body and for the developing calf is to feed Master Dry and Fitting Feed for the two months prior to calving.

Cows like this feed and get what they need to rebuild their systems from the strain of heavy milking.

Fitting Feed is high in vitamins, available minerals and carbohydrates.

It contains plenty of pure casein molasses and is mildly laxative.

Help ensure a trouble-free pregnancy, strong, healthy calves and higher milk yields by feeding Master Dry and Fitting Feed to your dry cows.
