A CLOTHING SURPRISE.

The latter part of last week we were busy opening our Fall Clothing, and elegant clothing it is. The largest and best stock we have ever opened. We would like to describe it here in detail, but that would fill the paper, so for the present we will call your attention to some lines of

MEN'S DOUBLE BREASTED SUITS

25 extra heavy all wool d. b. suits at $7 00. 50 extra heavy all wool d. b. suits, very fine trimmings, and best of work—makes a beautiful fall suit, at $9.50. 25 Black Cheviot, silk faced, d. b., as good as custom made, we will sell this at $12.50,

We certainly have the finest stock of clothing ever imported to Charlottetown. We guarantee to give you what you want at as low a figure as can be bought in Canada.

McKAY WOOLEN COMPANY.

Eye Dont's.

DON'T attempt to read in a reclining posture.
DON'T read with the light shining in your face. Place it so that it comes from behind.
DON'T use glasses without having your eyes properly examined.
DON'T forget that I am qualified to do this for you.

"GO THY WAY."

Go thy way, but let that way
Be ever worth the going.
Know thy way and never stray
In ways not worth the knowing.
Leave the way that goes astray
And seek a better path.
Straight and narrow all the way.
To realms unknown to sin and wrath.
Thus "Go thy way."

DIDN'T LIKE HIS BARGAIN.

His Broken Clock and Broken English
Broke Up the Official.

One of the officials of the postoffice department was somewhat alarmed and surprised not long ago to have a wild and excited Frenchman rush into his office with a clock under his arm and in strident tones and broken English demand his money back for the same. It seems he had bought the clock at one of the periodical sales of the dead letter office, at which all undelivered packages that have accumulated are auctioned off, but one purchase at his own risk, as the things are sold in the original packages, and neither the purchaser nor the auctioneer is expected to know what they contain.

"Yes, I bought ze clock zair, at ze dade letter office, and it go no pas de tout, pas de tout. So I bring her back to zis great government, an I want my money back. You understand, I want my money back," said the Frenchman.

"Did the auctioneer guarantee the clock to you?" asked the official. "Did he promise you it would go?"

"No, sair; no sair; no, sair!" shrieked the Frenchman. "But when I buy a clock I suppose she will go. If she no go, I want my money back. Here is zis ole clock. She is no good, pas de tout. Give me back my moneys."

"Now, let us talk zis matter over calmly," said the official. "You say the clock won't go. Have you tried to fix it? It has lain some time in the dead letter office. Perhaps it needs cleaning."

"I spend no more of my moneys on her—no more, you hear? Zere is ze clock I bought from zis government. Give me my moneys."

"It is quite impossible for you to get your money back," soothingly replied the assistant postmaster general, "but I'll tell you what I will do. I know something about clocks myself, and if you will come up to my house tonight I will try to help you fix this one. If we succeed, you will have your money's worth, and we shall all be happy."

But that was not what the Frenchman wanted. He grasped his despised purchase with both hands, and, holding it before him, shouted:

"Zair is no justice in zis country—no justice, no justice, no justice! You no give me my moneys back I tak' he home!" and, holding the clock in front of him, he disappeared, calling down maledictions on this country and this government.—New York Tribune.

VESUVIUS RAILROAD.

The Cars Hauled by Cable Over Wooden Rails on the Mountain.

Before one can get to the Vesuvius railway from Naples there is a journey of 15 miles, which can best be performed by carriage. There is no mistaking the way, for there is the mountain, showing a pillar of smoke by day and of fire by night. At the railway station we are more than 2,500 feet above the sea level.

The peculiarity of the Vesuvius railway is found in its construction, which consists of wooden stringers laid longitudinally and carrying a single rail, upon which ride the central wheels of the car.

There are, however, two other rails, placed on each side of the sleeper, near its base. These side rails are laid at an angle and are adapted to wheels the axes of which project from the floor of the coaches and bear closely against the rails on each side of the sleeper, thus keeping the carriage firmly upright.

There are two tracks, each being provided with two endless cables, which consist of steel ropes with hempen cord seven-eighths of an inch in diameter and constructed of six strands, each composed of eight wires. To the cars the cables are attached by grips retained in position by springs, to which are connected automatic brakes, by whose action the cars can be held securely in case of accidents to the cable or the driving machinery.

Should the weight of the descending car overbalance that of the car going up the brakes with which the trains are equipped regulate the speed of the machinery. The cars are so contrived that the passengers sit comfortably on horizontal seats with a level floor beneath their feet. The journey up or down only occupies 12 minutes, and the carriages hold about a dozen passengers.—Philadelphia Press.

Jowett's Sense of Humor.

The late master of Balliol college, Oxford, Dr. Jowett, loved a good story, especially one which exhibited the comic side of things. During a sickness from which he suffered many ills he was asked by a friend how he was.

Jowett replied by quoting the words of Sydney Smith, then canon of St. Paul's, who, when at the point of death—"which," said Jowett, "I am not"—declared that there was not as much left of him as would make a minor canon!

To another friend, who urged him to permit the publication of some of his sermons, Dr. Jowett said:

"Publish nothing that is not quite good. Don't be moved by people's opinion. There is a story of Bishop Barrington and Philpotts, afterward bishop of Exeter, who was at the time Barrington's secretary. The bishop said, 'I wish you to select for publication 12 of my sermons that you think will do me least discredit.' Shortly after, when the sermons had been chosen, the bishop asked, 'Do you think that these will do me credit?' 'I prefer, my lord,' answered Philpotts, 'to adhere to your lordship's former expression.' The sermons were not published."—Youth's Companion.

An Ungallant Wish.

In the court of sessions in Scotland the judges who do not attend or give a proper excuse for their absence are by law liable to a fine. This law, however, is never enforced, but it is common, on the first day of the session, for the absentee to send an excuse to the lord president. Lord Stonefield having sent such an excuse, on the president mentioning it the late Lord Justice Clerk Braxfield said, in his broad dialect, "What excuse can a stout fellow like him ha'e?" "My lord," said the president, "he has lost his wife." The justice, who was fitted with a Xantippe, replied: "Has he? That is a gude excuse indeed. I wish we had a' the same."—San Francisco Argonaut.
