

THE DAILY EXAMINER.

JUNE 5, 1884.

The Mails.

The mail arrangement is well enough. Under it we have a mail daily from all parts of the world. Some persons, including the Patriot, grumble because there is not a steamer running daily between Charlottetown and Pictou. But we ought to remember that Georgetown and the Eastern end of the Island has some claims in the matter of communication with the mainland, and that it is stipulated in the contract that the steamers shall call at Georgetown. Moreover, there is a mail from Halifax every day, except the day on which the steamer goes to Georgetown; and then it arrives here, by way of Georgetown, early on the following forenoon. As to the arrangement, we repeat, it's as good as we have a right to expect under existing circumstances.

But we have a "postal grievance," which may, should, must, and we have no doubt, will be remedied. Under the arrangement, the mails, by way of Summerside, ought to arrive in Charlottetown every evening at two minutes past eight o'clock. But, so far, this season they have not been, on any day, less than two hours later!

The EXAMINER has made some inquiries; and finds that the late arrivals are not due to the slowness of the trains or to the slackness of the Post Office officials.

Shall we be forced to extend the enquiry further?

Editorial Notes.

—A wealthy man in Ithaca, New York, has given $88,000 in aid of Cornell University.

—Three thousand iron workers are out of employment in Cincinnati, Ohio. The scale of prices submitted by the men is too high for the masters, and orders are slack; and so work is suspended.

—Orders have been received from headquarters at Ottawa that the P. E. Island Militia, going into camp on the 1st of July, shall do so with a full staff of officers in their respective corps. So the Patriot cried out, in this matter, before anyone was hurt!

—The late Princess Alice, whose letters have been published, sets an example, which many women would be none the worse to follow. In one of these letters, addressed to her mother, the Queen of England, she says:—"I have made all the summer out-walking dresses, seven in number, for the girls, not embroidered, but entirely made from beginning to end; likewise the new necessary flannel shawls for the expected. I manage all the nursery accounts and everything myself, which gives me plenty to do, as everything increases, and on account of the house we must live very economically for those next years."

Waterworks Notes.

An article from the point of view of our business men is unavoidably omitted today.

The sun is out at last; and the dust nuisance will soon prevail over everything. When there is dust in the houses, dust in the stores, and dust everywhere, and everything is hot and dry, people will wish that they could adjust the hose and turn on the tap, and have a stream of water to pour upon their sidewalks and streets.

Said a leading business man, discussing the water question, yesterday: "Who does not remember, with shame, that the Princess Louise, when she landed here, was received in a cloud of dust."

Reciprocal Trade.

A MOVEMENT IN CONGRESS LOOKING TO RECIPROCIITY—CANADA UNDER THE OLD TREATY.

The sub-committee of Congress on Foreign Affairs Committee, charged with the consideration of Representative Maybury's resolution, which requests the President to enter into negotiations with Great Britain for a renewal of the Canadian reciprocity treaty of 1854, have agreed upon a report. The sub-committee consists of Mr. Belmont (Dem. N. Y.) and Mr. Hitt (Rep. Ill.) The Committee recommend, as has been reported, that should the Executive see fit to entertain the propositions for freer

COMMERCIAL INTERCOURSE WITH CANADA, such negotiations would be received with favour. Mr. Hitt, who is charged with the preparation of the report, said in answer to an inquiry regarding it:—"We have before us a joint resolution requesting the president to negotiate with Great Britain for the renewal of the treaty of 1854—that precise instrument—not to discuss the relations of the two countries with a view to modifying them in the most advantageous manner to both under their present systems. The treaty-making power is the executive, and the constitution does not intend that the legislature should take the initiative in negotiations, certainly not so far as to prescribe in advance the precise terms on our side. Negotiations are bargaining, each party making the best terms possible, and it is better not to try to control the matter wholly by congress. The methods are different. For instance, the duty on lumber would be discussed here simply as part of the tariff system to be maintained or lowered in view of that trade only; in a negotiation, if we decide to admit lumber, then, for whatever we yield to the pressure of Canadians eager for admission to our markets, we might obtain extensive advantages in the admission of our manufactures to their markets."

THE TREATY OF 1864 was unsatisfactory and one-sided, after twelve years' trial, and was abrogated by us, much against the wish of Canada. The articles admitted by it free, reciprocally, were what Canada had to sell—products of the farm, forest and mines—but it excluded our own manufactures. Its renewal would give them a market, free of duty, of 56,000,000 people for almost everything they had to sell, and only give us a market of 4,500,000 people for our agricultural products. Long before the treaty was terminated in 1866, it was felt oppressive to our farming interests in places near the border. It lasted so long partly on account of the liberal sentiment of our people in all that relates to extending commerce. During the war the feeling cooled. We were pressed for revenue. We wanted to render our country more independent in its internal resources. Then the treaty was subjected to colder scrutiny as affecting business. Under it $229,000,000 worth of Canada's products had come into our market without paying duty, while scarce more than half that had been sold by us to Canada free of their tariff. The list of articles passing free had been arranged so that it worked unequally. That treaty, if renewed, would probably be as unsatisfactory as ever. But there may be something better done. The changes of eighteen years have been immense in both countries. The progress in wealth, numbers, activity, and especially in manufactures and intercourse by railway and water, has been on a vast scale, and the ARTIFICIAL RESTRICTIONS OF TARIFF on a line thousands of miles long have been more sensibly felt. There are great and manifest inducements to both countries to remove them altogether, or at least readjust them on fair terms mutually beneficial. The complete and unimpeded flow of business in both directions by a commercial union would be of inestimable benefit, stimulating industries, promoting prosperity and friendly feeling, as it produces common interests, and guaranteeing peace. It would tend by the inevitable logic of interest to similar treaties with other neighbors. We have just made one with Mexico and are negotiating one with Spain to cover Cuban commerce. A commercial union with Canada would erase the imaginary barrier to traffic that stretches clear across the continent on our northern line, giving us absolute freedom of trade with the people of Nova Scotia, Canada, Manitoba and British Columbia as now exists between the states. "Do I think there is any chance of its realization?" Well, Professor Goldwin Smith, who was here a few days ago, assured me that there was a deep and widespread feeling in favour of commercial union throughout Canada among all people except the officials, who, of course, cling to the present system by which they live, and he said discussion would rapidly increase it. Manitoba is eager for free trade with Chicago.

SIR CHARLES TUPPER recently came here from Ottawa under official instructions to broach the question of reciprocity, and he has gone to England to present it there and urge negotiations. Sir John Macdonald said as much as that Canada was ready to remove the duty on the leading products in trade whenever we would reciprocate. The English government will not readily assent. The British West Indian sugar traders, learning of our recent agreement with Spain, lightening the burden on our products going to Cuba, and of the Cuban reciprocity treaty under negotiation, waited on Lord Derby, the Colonial Secretary, at London, a few days ago, and pressed for a similar arrangement; but he replied that the British government was not prepared to allow the colonies to enter into reciprocal agreements with America. But England has long since ceased to treat Canada as really subject. The Dominion is practically independent. Her tariff to-day falls on English goods exactly as it does on American.
