Expo '67 Entertainment Notes On Its Cultural Highlights

I suppose that every one of us at one time or another, has yearned to thrill to the strains of beautiful music, or to witness a performance of graceful ballet as performed by world-famous artists in the realm of music and cultural tastes are ours in this exciting age of radio and television, when at the turn of a dial we may bring into our homes, performances of various and lovely types of art. In the past only the fortunate few could travel afar and see and hear world famed stars perform "live" and in person. Few indeed, were privileged to visit Austria, for example, and hear the Vienna State Opera, or see the Royal Ballet in England. Fewer still, would have opportunity to Journey to Milan and hear the famous La Scala Opera or sail to the Middle East to see the famed Tunisian Dancers.

But, in the Expo Year of 1967, we shall not need to cross a n ocean to witness and enjoy these cultural wonders of the world, for these and many more are coming to Canada. For the first time, this continent will play host to the greatest festival of music, drama and dancing ever known. A ticket to Montreal will put this world entertainment within our reach. The 3 modern theatres of the Place des Arts in Montreal have been taken over for the entire season, and Expo has built its own 2,000 seat theatre for film festivals and musical shows. The Automotive Stadium at Expo will be the site of six great spectacles. From the very beginning of the Expo period, something exciting will be taking place in these entertainment centres.

For example, if you plan your visit to Expo during the month of May, you will have the opportunity of seeing the Theatre du France from May 1st to 13th. Belgium's Ballet du Vingtieme Siecle plays from the 9th to the 13th, and its repertoire will include the once-controversial Stravinsky's "Rites of Spring" on May 15th, you may hear the World-famous Red Army Chorus and from the 17th to the 19th, one of the world's greatest orchestras - the Amsterdam Concertgebouw - will perform under the baton of Bernard Haitink, who is considered among the best of European conductors. From May 30th to June 4th, the Stockholm Royal Opera will be there, and will be performing Stravinsky's "Rites of Spring", under the direction of Ingmar Bergman. In June, visitors can enjoy performances in their respective fields by such artists as: Switzerland's Centre Dramatique Romand, and Swiss Orchestre Romande; the Melbourne Symphony Orchestra from Australia; London's Royal Ballet; the Troupe National Folklorique Tunisienne and the Teatro Stabile di Genoa. You can hear and watch the Hamburg State Opera, and the English Bath Festival Ensemble with the distinguished violinist, Yehudi Menuhin.

July brings the Zurich Chamber Orchestra, and the Paris Opera Ballet will perform Ballo's "Daphne and Chloe" in its original form, with choir.

A Swiss Gala, two ensembles from the Ukraine, one the Verevka Song and Dance Unit, and 20 soloists from the same region will be performing in August.

September will see the Vienna State Opera playing, followed by two nights of the Bach Choir of Munich, and five nights of the English Opera Group; the Israeli Festival runs from September 10th to 16th.

In the opinion of this writer, the highlight of all the season will be the month of October, when the Philharmonic Orchestra of Czechoslovakia will be playing on the night of October 2nd, the La Scala Opera of Milan from October 7th to 15th, and the National Theatre Company of Britain with Sir Laurence Olivier, from October 18th to 23rd. These, then will be some of the "wonders of Expo", which we shall be privileged to witness and enjoy during Canada's Mammoth Birthday Party staged in Montreal in '67. If your passport has not already been purchased, do see to it right away. Members of the Provincial Women's Committee for Expo still have passports available at discount prices.

'Almighty Shock' Is Called For Says Bishop

WORCESTER, England (ANS) - An Anglican bishop called here for an "almighty shock" like the closing of Westminster Abbey to bring home to people in this so-called "swinging" land what really matters.

The Right Rev. Philip Wheelton, former Bishop of Kimberley in South Africa, who was recently appointed Assistant Bishop of the Worcester Diocese, expressed his views in an interview with the diocesan magazine.

"In South Africa I found people much more aware of the church as a force," he said. "In England the fact that things are so much easier for people, and that there is confusion about what we believe, is reflected in the life and work of the church. It seems to have resulted in the reduction of spiritual life to a pretty low level."

"The simple desire to worship for worship's sake, common to Africa, is at a low ebb here."

"Our church in other lands has much to teach us. We take a great deal for granted while others have to fight for the church they love."

"What I think we need in this country is an almighty shock—like closing down Westminster Abbey—to make us ask what really matters in life."

ELLEN'S DIARY

The Leaves Drift Down From A Golden Willow

"We'll be working so far away today, Ellen, it's unlikely that we'll bother to come home for dinner," James said, come in where we were putting the breakfast things away. "You might make up a bile of lunch for me—not my great meal. Just enough to stay me over till evening."

A wind of the harvest was in the trees. We saw a yellow leaf drift away from the golden willow beyond the window, to settle presently on the lawn below. Lilac petals had drifted thus, we remembered. Apple bloom too, scarlet poppies and roses at the stirring of a summer breeze. Now the leaves that not so long ago were young and new as a babe in arms, were commencing to ripen and fall.

"Just a bite" we nodded, taking down from a cupboard a loaf of yesterday's baking, now in condition to slice nicely. Sandwiches, we would make. "Bless John Montagu, the 4th, Earl of Sandwich" a farmwife who has a number of youngsters attending school, chuckled the other morning, spreading a savory filling on a slice and topping it neatly with another. Sandwiches and favorite cookies, we would include, apples, and a thermos of tea, all of which, as James might remark, would be "if not fattening, at least filling!" and would stay his stomach until the dusk should bring them home.

We saw the little truck leave with some longing. So many times, before machines provided quick transportation home from reasonable distances to meals, we had carried an afternoon lunch to the field so that extra time could be given to the work. In the cropping, perhaps, with the spring-time lovely about. Or in summer when hay was being coiled or stacked in the field, and James had a feeling "there was broken weather" nearing, and there was no time to spare from the work. Or maybe we enjoyed the harvest time best of all, when the days shortened, and they threshed in some far field of the farm. When afternoons were "golden, and we came by way of a wood's road, where we met Autumn in the yellow reaches of sweet fern beside it. And the pulse of the machine which had there a day through the afternoon hours would stop beating, and in the
