Brews Special Ale For Oldest Town Fair

BARNSTAPLE England, Sept. 17 —(Reuters)— The town beadle of this Devonshire port locked himself up in the Guild Hall Tuesday, got a 500-year-old recipe out of its box and began brewing up a tub of spiced ale.

Concocting the lusty potion is about the only job left to this civic functionary these days and he does it once a year just before the opening of England's oldest town fair.

Tomorrow, the 4 1-2 gallons will be passed around to guests and a lucky few of the citizenry. The giant replica of a glove will be stuck up in the square, and with it a week of revelry will get under way.

It dates from the days when 1,000-year-old Barnstapel was a prosperous wool port and manufacturing centre in the Middle Ages. The harbor now is so badly silted it cannot be used, but Barnstaple still is a leading manufacturer of gloves.

Fred Ackland, 57, is the present beadle, an office largely superseded by the advent of police forces. As such, he is the only living man with knowledge of the secret recipe and is under oath not to pass it on to anyone except his successor.

The basis of the drink is obviously ordinary ale, but it is spiced, flavored and mulled out of all recognition. For days Auckland has been buying materials he needs—and some he doesn't need—at various stores so shopkeepers won't get wise to his secret.

The essentials are listed on a faded parchment.

The brewing takes about 2 1-2 hours, but "for a week afterward the very pleasant odor clings about the place." Ackland said today.

He will ladle the brew into silver cups from a giant silver bowl presented to the town by Capt. Benson, its most notorious mayor who was an 18th century pirate. The guests get priority treatment, and what is left seldom goes far among the town's 14,000 citizens.

Critical Of Anti-Union Stand Of N. B. Gov't

FREDERICTON, Sept. 17—(CP) — The "anti-union" stand of the New Brunswick Government in the present provincial election campaign was scored Tuesday by James A. Whitebone, president of the New Brunswick Federeation of Labor, in his report at the opening session of the Federation's annual convention.

With reference to polling day next Monday, Mr. Whitebone reminded the delegates of the political motto of the American Federation of Labor: "Elect your friends and defeat your enemies."

(The New Brunswick Federation of Labor is affiliated with the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada and the A. F. L.)

Mr. Whitebone said:

"The anti-union stand of the present provincial government, and public statements of Premier John B. McNair to the effect that employees of his government would not be permitteed to hold membership in any organization having affiliations outside the province, and the action of Mr. McNair in calling a provincial election on the issue of recognition of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (T. L. C. - A. F. L.) as the bargaining agent for employees of the New Brunswick Electric Power Commission, are matters that cannot be ignored by labor nor can action be deferred. . ."

This policy has been "roundly condemned, not only by labor but by many outside our ranks who have been staunch supporters of Premier McNair and his government. Union recognition is in no sense a political issue. It is purely a labor-management matter which affects the lives and working conditions of all employees of the Province of New Brunswick.

"The seriousness of the situation is realized far beyond the borders of New Brunswick, and the matter has been considered of such grave importance to all the workers of Canada that the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, Canada's greatest labor group, in convention recently at Winnipeg, adopted by unanimous vote of the delegates a statement condemning the McNair Government for its stand on the question of recognition of international unions. . .

"The right of workers to organize, to enjoy recognition of their unions, and to conclude collective agreements with their employers has been firmly established by law and by custom throughout the whole of Canada, and it is astounding indeed that any provincial government should introduce such an issue as a major point in its election campaign. Certainly any government holding such convictions exhibits a colossal gall when they term themselves 'Liberal'."

N. B. Conservative Leader Denies Deal

SAINT JOHN, N. B., Sept. 17—(CP)—H. J. Flemming, New Brunswick Progressive Conservative leader, Tuesday denied having made any commitment to employees of the New Brunswick Electric Power Commission. He spoke at a public meeting here.

(Premier John B. McNair has charged a "deal" between Mr. Flemming and H. C. Tracy, international representative of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (T.L.C.-A.F.L.). The Liberal Government refused to recognize this union as bargaining agent for power commission employees and Mr. McNair called a provincial election on the issue.

(The Premier has quoted Mr. Tracy as having said he had received a promise that if the Progressive Conservative Party were successful in next Monday's election all government employees would be brought under the Provincial Labor Relations Act, which at present excludes them.)

Mr. Flemming accused Premier McNair of engaging in a "desperate search for misleading issues—anything which would divert public attention from the failure of his administration to give this province good government, reasonable levels of taxation, adequate services and an aggressive policy of economic development."

Canadians Help Prepare For Atomic Tests

OTTAWA, Sept. 17 — (CP) — The Defence Research Board said Tuesday four Canadian scientists have been helping Britain in preparations for the British atomic weapons trials off Australia but declined to give their names.

It said some of them will probably take part in the actual tests this fall "as working member of various scientific teams."

They are believed to be in addition to Dr. O. M. Solandt, head of D.R.B. who already is in Australia and expected to take part in the tests.

The four scientists, all members of the D.R.B. staff, have been loaned to the British Ministry of Supply to assist in preparations for the tests.

The cautious announcement didn't say so but they are understood to have gone overseas some time ago. The secrecy about their names is only part of the general secrecy surrounding the tests.

The announcement, by E. L. Davies, vice chairman of D.R.B. — the scientific arm of the Defence Department — said the four scientists "are actively employed in their various fields.
