NOTES AND COMMENTS

The Kilkenny Journal describes Canada as "a little worse than Connaught and a little better than hell."

The Mail and Empire points out that Mr. Fielding has made two tariffs in about one month, thereby beating all previous records.

Great interest is now being taken in airying all through the Northwest Territories, and farmers everywhere are improving and increasing their herds of cattle, both for dairying and the production of beef, and there is a great demand for young bulls of dairy breeds.

Five small boys ranging in age from nine to fourteen years sentenced to fine and imprisonment for larceny. This is the police court record for to-day. The need of a reformatory or school of correction where youthful offenders such as these may be sent is becoming more and more manifest each day.

It is pointed out by the Nation that "greater New York," the colossal municipality which will be organized next winter, will have a larger population than the United States had when the nation was formed, and a budget of $75,000,000. The emoluments attached to the chief appointments will amount to nearly $220,000.

In opposition, as an exchange points out, the Liberals ridiculed the Conservative policy of developing trade with Australia and other parts of the empire, claiming that all this country needed was commercial union or unrestricted reciprocity with the United States. The Liberals have been in power less than a year and already Hon. A. G. Jones, of Halifax, has been appointed on a trade mission to Southern Europe, while Mr. Sheppard, a Toronto newspaper man who rendered the party some service, has been sent to South and Central America, and now it is announced, in a Toronto despatch, that "Mr. Geo. Anderson, Manager of the Royal Oil Co., has been selected by the government to pay a visit to Japan for the purpose of ascertaining what prospect there is for enlarging the market for Canadian products in that kingdom." From the United States to Japan for trade is a big jump, even for the political acrobats now in power.

The Toronto correspondent of the New York Post says: The commercial aspirations of the Liberal party are towards trade with the United States. Whatever outward form Mr. Laurier's policy might assume, the steady purpose that ran through it was to obtain reciprocity with the country beyond the southern boundary line. The conservatives had tried repeatedly and in vain to do this, and Mr. Laurier wanted the distinction of making that policy a success. Throughout this course since it came into power, his government has done nothing to prejudice the chances of reciprocity. Its adoption of the double-column tariff looks like a right about-face, but it was not. It was a trick to captivate British sentiment and to give popularity to the new tariff. It was the aim of the government to make its fiscal scheme superficial enough to afford standing-ground for all interests, and, of course more for the great body of British affection than for any other. But the profound policy of the scheme is not to be studied on its surface. It can be the germ of the whole of the free trade, and the more it realizes that, the more it would make room in the Canadian market for American products.

Commenting on the report from the Argentine Republic, that British Government agents are negotiating for the purchase of a large number of horses, because these animals are superior for army purposes to any that can be had in the United States, the Hamilton Spectator remarks: There is a lesson in this for Canadian farmers. British army agents have come to this country in search of horses for military purposes, and although they were repared to pay good prices they were unable to secure any great number of suitable horses. The reason is that the Canadian farmer does not breed the right sort of horses. He pays entirely too much attention to the trotting breed. He is prone to secure the services of Abdallah Jupiter Thunderbolt, a stallion whose one good point consists in the fact that his grand dam once trotted a mile in 2.22, and the result of mixing this trotting blood with the coarse mares of the country is a nondescript little rat seldom good for anything more than the drawing of a light sulky. Sometimes he is equal to the task of drawing that villainous contrivance the top buggy with the owner's son and the late's best gift inside, at a fair rate of speed; but he is good for nothing else. The country is full of these rats, and there is neither work nor money in them. Attempts have been made, by importing suitable hackney and thorough bred stallions, to induce the Canadian farmer to go in for something in the horse line which will bring the British army agents frequently to this country, and but good money into the pockets of the people; but the average farmer seldom takes advantage of these opportunities, and the importers of good stallions have been discouraged.

PASSED THE CENTURY MARK.

According to the Truro News James Ross of East St. Martin's N B is 107 years of age. He was born in the County of Inverness Scotland, and was 25 years old when "Waterloo was fought and won." In the early seventies he immigrated to Pictou N S and later came to St. Martins, where he has ever since resided.

This aged Scotchman, though nearly five score years and ten, is yet strong and free from aches and pains, rheumatic twinges are unknown to him. He goes out daily and last summer mowed a field of grass near his home.

Strange, this man who has lived a century and more, has never seen a railway train! He has used tobacco since boyhood, and today, the pipe is his greatest luxury.

WOULD BE NO UNITED STATES.

The British Schools and Universities Club celebrated the Queen's birthday in New York a few nights ago. Rev. Dr. D. Parker Morgan, president of the club, spoke of the good traits and kindness of heart of the Queen. He referred to the fact that at the time of the announcements of the deaths of President Garfield and General Grant the Queen was one of the first to send messages of sympathy. "She has always had her hand on the helm of State," said Dr. Morgan. "Had she been on the throne a little over a century ago the separation would never have occurred between the American colonies and England. She would have prevented words from being uttered which created the bitter feeling that could not be allayed and the difficulties which could not be bridged over."

The cattle inspectors report of the live stock shippings from Montreal, show that the total number shipped in 1896 was 96,448, against 94,972 in 1895, and 86,635 in 1894. The number reported lost was 409. The number of horses shipped was 10,421, against 13,303 in 1895, and 5,623 in 1894. The total number of sheep for the season of 1896 was 76,520, as against 210,600 in 1895.

Advices from Cuba have been received by the local junta in Philadelphia to the effect that General Gomez will temporarily resign as commander of the insurgent forces and come to this country as secretary of war pro tem of the Cuban republic to confer with President McKinley on the situation. During his absence General Garcia will command.

Wm. Edwards was assassinated at his home near Trilby, Fla., Tuesday night. He and his two children were eating supper when parties concealed in the woods fired through a window, killing Edwards instantly. He was a one armed, ex-federal soldier. This is the seventh man killed in Whitehurst-Whidden-Stevenson feud. Bud Stevenson was assassinated in his field two months ago. It was thought Edwards did it, and he was marked by friends of Stevenson.

The total number of wrecks and casualties during last year of British and Canadian sea going vessels reported to the department was 273, with a loss of $1,236,761. The number of lives reported lost was 43. The registered merchant shipping on December 31, 1896 was 7,279 vessels, measuring 788,299 tons register tonnage being an increase of 17 vessels, and a decrease of 36,537 tons as compared with 1895. Assuming the average value to be $30 per ton, the value of the register tonnage of Canada would be $23,678,000. During the year 227 new vessels were built and registered, of a value of $726,000, estimating the tonnage at $45 per ton.

ELECTRICAL PROBE A SUCCESS.

The first successful test of the electrical probe was made at New York last week in Bellevue Hospital to extract a bullet from the head of Henry Sarstet, thirty-nine years old. He sent it through his right temple the previous day, at his home, with suicidal intent. A twenty two calibre bullet is small, and the groove is made very narrow and soon closed up. Professor Stewart, visiting surgeon of the third medical staff, attached some fine wires to a dry battery and sent the charged probe through the man's head until it reached the bullet. Just at the instant the probe and bullet came in contact with each other a small electric bell went off. This told the professor the bullet had been reached, and in another few minutes the missile was removed. Sarstet, the doctors think, has an even chance of recovery.
