Remember When

By Jim Griffith

On Thursday evening, October 25, I had the pleasure of listening to Professor J.J. Coyle reflect upon some of his university experiences at St. Dunstons during the late 1920's. I must say that the image which he presented certainly reminded me of St. Dunstons during the mid 1960's. The rules and regulations, especially those for residence students, did not change very much over the period of 40 years.

The conduct of students attending S.D.U. had to correspond with the Christian principles of living. It was the university's intention to develop habits of virtue within the youth at the time. Discipline was looked upon as being necessary for this development, so the University had rules and regulations which were to be strictly adhered to. The point was made that respect and obedience must be shown to all in authority.

I REMEMBER WHEN-

-The rising hour was 7:00 a.m. Students had to have their beds made by 10:00 a.m. and had to submit to a weekly inspection by the student prefect. It was strongly suggested that the lights be turned out by 12:00 p.m. and the University also had the right to enter a student's room at any time, without prior notification. All permissions to leave campus were granted by the Dean of Residence. When such a permission was granted, the student had to report his return to campus immediately to the Dean. All students, except Freshmen, were permitted to leave the campus every day from noon until 11:00 p.m., except where such absence interfered with classes or lab attendance. Freshmen students had one permission per week until 11:00 p.m. Students were not permitted to spend over night from campus unless the Dean of Men had given them permission to do so. To return very late, after the permission time had expired, was strictly forbidden. The penalty for the first offence was a $5.00 fine, but the second offence was doubled to $10.00, and should this unfortunate offence occur three times in a row, the student was expelled from residence for the remainder of the year. If you were a Sophomore, Junior or Senior, your slate was wiped clean at the end of the semester. The Freshmen however, had to carry their penalties over from one term to the other.

I also REMEMBER WHEN-

-Visitors were not permitted in the residences, at all. The parlor of Main Building, which is presently the office occupied by Father Bolger, was reserved for visitors. Visitors included anyone who was not a student living in the particular residence. Parents, brothers, sisters, and other relatives were to be met in the parlour in Main Building only.

The abuse of intoxicating liquor, beer included, or the possession of such on the campus, was strictly forbidden. All cases involving the infraction of this rule, were referred directly to the Faculty Discipline Committee. Students were not permitted representation on this Committee. Violations of this particular rule constituted sufficient cause for the infliction of a serious penalty.

These rules and regulations were in effect until 1966.

'Class, I regret to inform you that Professor Terwilliger cannot be with you today, having just run to Venezuela with our molecular research funds. However, before he left he asked me to have you try these problems...'
