HYPNOTISM IN COURT.

A Verdict of a Jury Rendered Under Peculiar Circumstances. "Hypnotism," remarked the professor, "is a most peculiar power. A dozen years ago, when hypnotism had not been tried into its present fame, I was one of twelve jurymen in a murder trial. It was an intelligent jury, too."

"Of course," laughed the reporter, "otherwise you would not have been there."

"That's all right," smiled the professor, "but our intelligence was of no great value to us. The case was one of murder, in which the murderer gained a fortune by getting an heir out of the way and taking his place. The trial did not take place until two years after the death of the victim, and the evidence was very nearly circumstantial, but it was a remarkably clear case of circumstances. Well, there wasn't anything peculiar or interesting that wouldn't have happened at any murder trial, but the prisoner was extraordinary, at least as to his eyes, which were of the piercing kind one reads of in stories to chill the blood."

"He did not use them, however, to any extent until all the evidence was in and the attorneys began their talk. Then he turned them upon the jury and fastened them there, as if pleading with us to save him. All the arguments were in by 6 o'clock the first day, and the judge began to charge the jury. All the soul of the prisoner seemed then to be in his eyes, and I could not get my mind on anything but the prisoner. What the judge was saying seemed to be a far-off whisper, vague and indistinct. Whether the other jurymen were affected as I was I did not know, because I hardly realized that there was anyone on the jury except myself and that the prisoner was looking at me for help."

"I had an indistinct idea that he was unworthy to be saved, but in spite of myself I could not bring myself to condemn him. Then the jury was sent out, the eyes of the prisoner following until the door was between us. I was the foreman and as soon as we had entered the room and sat down, I said, 'Gentlemen, the prisoner is not guilty.' My statement was assented to without a dissenting voice, and in five minutes' time we were in the next again, and ten minutes later the prisoner was profusely thanking us for a verdict in his favor."

"Then he left the court-room quickly and the jury was discharged. We walked out as if we were dazed, the most peculiar and uncomfortable feeling that I ever experienced, and I went to bed that night feeling as if I were smothering. Next morning I was all right again and I made it a point to question my fellow jurymen. In each case I discovered an experience similar to mine, but we hardly dared say we had been hypnotized. That winter a traveling hypnotist came to town and that jury put itself in his hands at a private seance, and every man on it was what is called a 'sensitive.' That settled the business. The prisoner had hypnotized the jury and had received a verdict as he wanted it, but it was not to be retraced, and the verdict stood."

After taking a few bottles she was completely cured and her health has been the best ever since." MRS. ADDIE PECK, 12 Railroad Place, Amsterdam, N. Y.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—Latest U. S. Gov't Report

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE. "X" Rays in Piracy. The pliers scanned the distant horizon with one of his eagle eyes. "Ha!" It was a short word, but there must have been a motive for it. "A sail! a sail!" Turning to his first mate he commanded him, with a fearful oath, to run up the regulation flag. That person replied that there wasn't one, as the only flag they ever had was shot away in the last affair. Was the pirate chief rattled? Nay! For the bold buccaner to rush down into his cabin, bring up his Roentgen camera, and by means of the X rays, to take an instantaneous photograph of the mate's skull and a couple of cross bones from his twisted leg was but the work of a moment, and in a twink the subtle poison was being from the foretopsal of the saucy Plankwalker. From that instant, as is usual in such cases, all was excitement.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

Teeth Reading—A New Fad.

Teeth-reading is the latest method of investigating character. Phrenology is dis-faded, palmistry has fallen into disrepute. Something new had to be devised, and at last it has been found that the teeth form the smaller animals and ethietho undiscovered secrets. The science is only in its infancy yet, but the following are two or three of the items which its professors assert to be incontrovertible: Teeth that are long and narrow denote vanity; projectors indicate a grasping disposition; trenchery is best which a traveling hypnotist came to town and that jury put itself in his hands at a private seance, and every man on it was what is called a 'sensitive.' That settled the business. The prisoner had hypnotized the jury and had received a verdict as he wanted it, but it was not to be retraced, and the verdict stood."

Half-Storms in the Orange Free State.

One of these republics—the Orange Free State—is very nearly as large as England, and just as large as the State of New York. It lies from 4,000 to 5,000 feet above the sea, and is mostly level, with some low ranges of hills. The surface is bare of wood, except in a few sheltered spots where the smaller animals and ethietho undiscovered secrets. The science is only in its infancy yet, but the following are two or three of the items which its professors assert to be incontrovertible: Teeth that are long and narrow denote vanity; projectors indicate a grasping disposition; trenchery is best which a traveling hypnotist came to town and that jury put itself in his hands at a private seance, and every man on it was what is called a 'sensitive.' That settled the business. The prisoner had hypnotized the jury and had received a verdict as he wanted it, but it was not to be retraced, and the verdict stood."

What the Spleen Really Is.

The physiologists of old were interested in and puzzled by the spleen. It did not make a secretion, and the removal of the organ did not seem to create much disturbance of the vital functions. Modern physiology shows that the spleen sometimes kills the smaller animals and ethietho undiscovered secrets. The science is only in its infancy yet, but the following are two or three of the items which its professors assert to be incontrovertible: Teeth that are long and narrow denote vanity; projectors indicate a grasping disposition; trenchery is best which a traveling hypnotist came to town and that jury put itself in his hands at a private seance, and every man on it was what is called a 'sensitive.' That settled the business. The prisoner had hypnotized the jury and had received a verdict as he wanted it, but it was not to be retraced, and the verdict stood."

Calming the Waters.

Everyone knows the wonderful effect of "pouring oil upon troubled waters" but an experiment made upon the same principle by the officers of the steamship Scandia of Hamburg is quite as wonderful. During a recent trip to the United States the vessel, while in mid-ocean, was struck by a heavy storm. It occurred to the officers to dissolve a large quantity of soap in tubs of water. Having thus obtained several gallons of soap suds, they threw it overboard off the bows of the ship. The calming effect on the angry sea was almost instantaneous, and the vessel soon began to navigate without difficulty.

Weak, Nervous Women.

One to whom a night's rest was unknown. Strength and good health restored. I was subject to frequent attacks of nervousness that seemed to sap all my vitality and left me in a state of weakness and misery. I could not resist food and such a thing as a good night's rest was unknown. Incapable of any exertion and with an ever present tired and despondent feeling. Medicines that I took did not do any good; it was a case of gradually becoming weaker and weaker. Hearing of Scott's Sarsaparilla and its success with similar cases to mine, I used it, and from the first few doses began to get better, appetite returned, got natural and refreshing sleep. I grew stronger, in fact life seemed to be fanned into me.—Lottie Graham, 174 Crawford Street, Toronto.
