Sacred Edifice at Last Completed
 GRAND ANSE, N. B., April 6.—(C.P.)—After 36 years of care in planning and hard work, often in the face of what seemed insurmountable difficulties, what is deemed the finest and only edifice built entirely of stone, within and without, is nearing completion. It is the Church of St. Simon and St. Jude in this little New Brunswick village.
 The church has not actually taken 36 years in its construction. Often there have been delays which postponed work for weeks at a time. But on and on these courageous and religious French Canadians struggled. Many of those who dreamed of the church, many of those who assisted in its foundation, have passed on. All the building materials have been secured within a mile of the building. All the work has been done by the parishioners themselves.
 The first Catholic church at Grand Anse on the shores of Bay Chaleur in northern New Brunswick, was built in 1902. Three years later it was destroyed by fire and another was built the following year.
 In 1927, the present parish priest, Rev. Father Devesque, came to Grand Anse and it was he who conceived the idea of having the church built entirely of sandstone from the Bay Chaleur cliffs. His plan caught the fancy of the people.
 A 70-year-old man, Damase Degruy, who is also an expert stone cutter, drew the plans. He too with the aid of a young assistant with only six months experience, with hammer and chisel, carved out the great altar.
 An exact replica of the front of the church, the altar is composed of stone and weighs six tons. To support its weight, two columns have been sunk through the basement of the church into the solid rock below. Two smaller altars, similar in design, stand against the wall of the chancel and the pulpit is built of stone blocks.
 Fourteen massive stone columns rise to the vaulted roof of the church, formed of thin stone. Along each wall is a row of seven similar columns and all these support Roman arches. The 24 side windows are also Roman arched. The church will accommodate 1,000 worshippers.
 On each side wall are a series of pictures, "The Way of the Cross," the work of a youth of 20, Donat Clement. When he painted the pictures, he had never received instruction in drawing or painting. The work is of his own natural ability.
 The steeple rises 180 feet from the ground and may be seen for miles. Although more than 150 men have worked on the edifice, the skilled labor has been done by only five stone masons and 20 carpenters. During the past two years alone, 2,080 work-hours have been put in by the parishioners.

DREW GUN CARRIAGE IN FAINT
 LONDON—Praising the fine discipline and bearing of naval crews which drew the gun carriage bearing the coffin at King George's funeral, one newspaper said one of the sailors fainted as the cortege passed Hyde Park corner but was supported by his marching comrades till he recovered.

REBUILD EUSTON STATION
 LONDON, April 7. (C.P.)—Plans for the rebuilding of Euston station will make the London terminus of the London, Scottish and Railway one of the best equipped and most modern stations in the world.

Air Crafts Boom
Serving British
Expansion Plans
 LONDON, April 7. (C.P.)—Giving the House of Commons a vivid impression of the program of air force expansion, Sir Philip Sassoon, under-secretary of state for air, said the British government anticipated taking delivery during the next three years of a larger number of airplanes than during the entire 17 years since the war.
 "The number of employees in the aircraft industry proper, that is, in the works of manufacturers of machines and engines rose during the last three months of 1935 by 650 and is still steadily increasing," Sir Philip pointed out.
 Britain has a new single-seat fighter flying which in official trials has achieved a speed of well over 300 miles an hour, it was revealed. Another which had just begun its trials was confidently expected to reach, at least the same speed. The under-secretary said the single-seat fighter "according to the latest information in our possession will be the fastest aircraft of this category in service in the world."
 Another "Key type" in the program of expansion of the Royal Air Force—the medium bomber, was considered. "In this category," Sir Philip said, "we have two or three types of the very highest promise about to pass into large-scale production. One of them is a development from the machine so generously presented to the Royal Air Force by Lord Rothermere. This aircraft (the Bristol Type 142 monoplane) affords an interesting illustration of the different characteristics which are increasingly called for between purely civil and military types. It had been converted from a low-wing monoplane to a mid-wing monoplane. All of the indications are that in speed, range and load-carrying capacity this type will be quite outstanding.
 "Machines which promise excellently are in course of development in other important categories. The House can rest assured that over the Force as a whole, our equipment will be second to none. I need hardly emphasize that in the air, as in so many other spheres, there is something even more important than numerical strength, and that is quality."
 The under-secretary announced Imperial Airways would remain the instrument of government for the development of Empire air routes, including the North Atlantic, but that in other spheres, where no wasteful competition would result, government were prepared within the limits of available resources to assist any other organizations with a similar support.
 "Four years ago," he said, "the mileage of our Imperial air routes was 8320, today it is 21,243. When all of our projected services are in operation it will reach a total of 41,405. These figures exclude throughout the very extensive international routes operated by the Dominion—Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa—and by India.
 "Internal services have continued to make satisfactory progress. There are now 12 companies operating regular air services in this country, with a route mileage of more than 5000 miles. Compared with two years ago the increase in the number of registered aircraft engaged in regular air transport is no less than 100 per cent."

WILL TRY JUDGE ON IMPEACHMENT
 WASHINGTON, April 7.—(C.P.)—The United States Senate turns from its familiar role April 6 to become for the 12th time in history a solemn court of justice.
 On that day Judge Halted L. Ritter of the South Florida district must answer impeachment proceedings voted against him by the House of Representatives charging that he allowed excessive retainer fees to a former law partner. A vote of two-thirds of the Senators present is necessary for conviction and removal from office.
 The dignified senate chamber will be transformed for the trial

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR FLYING POST
 LONDON, April 7.—(C.P.)—No extra "air mail" fee is now necessary for postal air transport from the United Kingdom to Denmark, Finland, Norway and Sweden.
 Letters and postcards addressed to places in those countries will be conveyed by air at the ordinary international postage rates whenever use of the air method will expedite delivery. Once again, Great Britain has taken, this time with the co-operation of four countries, a big step forward in the development of air mail services.
 Air mail leaving London on Monday is delivered by first post in Copenhagen the next.

QUEEN MARY MAY CALL AT HALIFAX
 HALIFAX, April 7.—(C.P.)—Great Britain's bid for the blue ribbon of the Atlantic, the new liner Queen Mary, may visit Nova Scotia this summer.
 "The government of Nova Scotia has been endeavoring for months to have the Queen Mary call at Halifax in order that the people of this province may have an opportunity of viewing the world's premier liner," Hon. A. S. MacMillan, Minister of Highways, said in a statement.
 "The information we have at present is that while a cruise to Halifax during her early voyage will not be possible, there is a distinct possibility that later in the season this will be arranged."
