A Greeting Match.
"When! Did you ever see such go-goonness! Alice has certainly outdone herself this time, so I'll give her Ford as he opened the parcel and carefully drew from its tissue paper wrappings the elaborately embroidered Christmas gift.
"I don't know on fancy work but this is a hummer and no mistake," continued Jack as he held the silken trifle at arm's length and examined it critically. "Dear little girl, she made that herself, too; every bit of it. Isn't she a darling! There's more work on that than on one of my balance sheets.
It's a beautiful thing, but— and Jack's jaw dropped three inches. "What the dence is it, anyway? H-u-m; that won't do. I must find out before I write and thank her for it. It would never do to have her think that I didn't recognize what it was intended for at once. Oh, mother! Oh, girl! Come in here a moment; I want to show you something!" he called loudly.

Mrs. Ford was the first to enter the room in response to her call for assistance, but the other members of the family quickly followed her, and formed a group around the gift, where the present was displayed in all its rainbow splendor.
"What do you think of that?" asked Jack, proudly.
"It's very pretty. That stuff must have cost—I don't know—how—much a yard. It's one of the most exquisite monochromes I ever saw," said Mrs.
Ford, admiringly.
"A monochrom? Isn't it a little too large for that?" inquired he, dubiously.
Jack frowned. "It's to hold your slippers," cried Lily, the eldest sister, in a tone of entire conviction.
"You're joking. Such a use seemed like a desecration."
"No, it isn't. I guess it is to put socks in," hazarded another expert.
"Yes, or gloves, or writing paper, or —or photographs," suggested the Baby, who was always bound to have her say.
"Oh, well, but which?" cried Jack in despair.
"Oh, never mind; it's perfectly sweet, anyway. What difference does it make if it's for the feminine chorus."
"But I want to know what it's for!"
"Ask Alice."
"I'd like to see it, if you mean to say you can't tell me."
"No," admitted the girl. "We have told you what it is for."
"Oh, I could guess myself," cried Jack, scornfully. "Perhaps it's to hold pipes or cigars. Ma, be it a dress shirt shield. How would it do for souvenir pocket for hair brush, or for the collars and cuffs, eh? Couldn't we use it for a chair cushion or a sofa pillow, could it? Isn't a dictionary cover, or a wall pocket, don't you think? Sure it isn't a match safe in disguise? Oh, you girls don't seem to have a reasonable idea among you. Never mind, run along now, go and talk about who's engaged—and who isn't. I'll figure this out myself. Hang it all! what good are sisters to a fellow anyway?" Harry Romaine, in the Christmas Harper's Monthly.

A Pleasant Remembrance.
"Ethel," said the landlady to her daughter, "we must make the Christmas season a pleasant one for the boarders. Suppose we have them all at hanging up their stockings on Christmas Eve so that we may put some little remembrance in each?"
"That is a very good idea, mother.
We can give Mr. Moody a penknife, to Mr. Palette, the artist, we can give a box of paints, and Mr. Spangler would be delighted with a patent lead pencil, and for Mr. Slowboy we could get a well let me see—what would you suggest for Mr. Slowboy's gift, mother?" "Mr. Slowboy's unrecipited bill will do for Mr. Slowboy," replied the old lady, sternly.

The Perennial Complaint.
"Now, my dear," said Mr. Younghusband to the partner of his joys, who was about to start forth on Christmas shopping trip, "get presents for all the family in-law, and by a nice lot of things, for the children, and for the two hundred dollars this month—you know you did."
And Mr. Younghusband only sighed.

A Delicious Christmas Pudding Fresh.
Stir to a cream one cup of fresh butter, two cups of pulverized sugar, and add the juice of one lemon, or a couple of teaspoonsful of vanilla, and a little grated nutmeg. Smooth into a mould with a broad flat and set away to keep cool until the pudding is ready to serve.

Christmas Confidences.
"Be sure and put the best things on top," said the grocer to his wife, as she was filling the stockings.
"If you knew what I was made of," said the baker's minute pie to the small boy, "you wouldn't touch me."
"They say one is apt to dream of her future husband at Christmas," remarked a widow to herself. "I hope I won't dream of my past one."
"Charlie gets only seven dollars a week," reasoned Miss Decit, "so I'm afraid this locket can't be real good. I will take it to the jeweler to be tested."
"It was very kind of the Goodheart's to remember us," said Mrs. Starley to her husband, "but I think it would look better if they had written instead of buying people presents."
"I was so hard up at Christmas," remarked a tramp, "that I couldn't get enough to eat, let alone anything to drink. As a last resort I rang the minister's bell and asked him if he would give a little food to a repentant sinner who hadn't eaten anything for a week."
"If you're truly repentant," he said,
"I'll save you, my poor man."
"I am, sir, I replied, feeling sure he'd invite me into the kitchen."
"In that case," he returned, "just kneel down there on the stoop and I'll give you some food for reflection."

COD LIVER OIL has long been known to the Medical Profession as perhaps the best single remedy for CONSUMPTION and other Wasting Diseases—but most sick or ailing people have an unquarable aversion to it, in its crude state.
The Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda are only second to Cod Liver Oil in their curative effects in the above complaints.
But PERINA'S Emulsion of the Oil, while retaining all its medicinal virtues, is completely disguised both from eye and palate, so as to be agreeable to the most delicate stomach, while its curative effect is enhanced one hundred per cent. by its scientific association with the salts of Phosphorus.
For sale by all Druggists at 50 cents bottle.

Haverly—I asked her what she loved best in the world, and her answer was short and sweet.
Austen—Did she say "yes?"
Haverly—No. "Candy." Arth—Now I think I have been very successful in catching the exact expression of your husband's face.
Mrs. Weds—Oh, I'm not particular about that. You know I'm going to be married again, and my prospective second husband is not what might be called a handsome man, and I would not like to have him suffer any feelings of jealousy when he gazes upon the portrait of my poor, departed Albert.
"How much is seven and nine?" asked the teacher.
"Dunno," said the boy at the foot of the class.
"Well, suppose I say that your father and your uncle went fishing Saturday—" "They didn't go a-fishing!"
"Well, just suppose that they did, and your father brought home seven fish and your uncle nine more—what would that be?"
"It'd be an awful surprise to ma!" said h, with an appreciative grin.

ENDORSES DR. ROSE.
A Quebec Physician who Corroborates Dr.
Rose's Opinion.
PORTLAND, Dec. 3.—The letter of Dr. A.
G. McCormick, of Richmond, Que., testifying to his complete and permanent cure from Bright's Disease by Dodd's Kidney Pills, has been read with much interest here, supporting as it does the recent letter of Dr. E. A. Rose, of this place, who wears of Diabete, by the use of these pills. Of course no further corroboration of the curative qualities of Dodd's Kidney Pills was required other than the testimony of Dr. Rose, but a satisfaction to know that other medical men are able to join the Dr. in testifying to the worth of the pills from personal trial.

Nervous debility, general debility, then consumption; step by step, that's the way to go. Take a course of Hawker's Nerve

She—Yes, I think so; if there are any men there.

Neuralgia and toothache are speedily relieved by a free application of Dr. Man-that.

would not contradict me.
Mr. Muchwed—Then I don't wonder you never quarrelled.

gives you just what you ask for. He does not give you the best form in which to take
