Let's Talk It Over

A Prince County Viewpoint

by "G"

Now might be a good time for parents and teachers to give the small fry under their charge a few lessons in the technique of acceptable Halloween tricks. Children should be made to see that there is just as much fun playing tricks that cause no one any serious loss as there is in willful destruction of property, public and private.

We remember a youngster reciting his escapades on Halloween and we noticed they ran the gamut from innocent pranks to serious breaches of the law. He and his mates took a cow out of a barn and tied it to the owner's front door. This would cause some little inconvenience in getting the animal back to her proper quarters but it did not involve anything serious, and the averaging man with a healthy functioning liver would take such a prank with good-natured equanimity.

They lifted gates and placed them some distance away from their proper situations. They had the time-honored tick-tack in operation, which might worry house inmates on any other night except Halloween. But they lifted a case of pop from a soft-drink delivery, and they unscrewed an arc of lights over a theatre entrance and smashed the bulbs against a billboard.

These "pranks" were very different from the others. The first was outright theft, and the occasion of Halloween did not make it anything else. The latter was willful destruction of property, involving considerable loss to the theatre owner who was in a business devoted to supplying those same boys with entertainment.

Some young people get the idea that the name Halloween gives them a one-night license to break the law. They do not seem to realize that a crime committed on Halloween night calls for the same punishment as a crime committed at any other time.

No one wants to deprive the children of the fun and frolic of this mystic evening. The masks, the pumpkin heads illuminated with candles, the bobbing of apples, the hair-combing before a mirror at midnight, ghost writings and all the other Halloween junk take us back to our own childhoods, and the Halloween celebration is a treasured custom of our rich tradition. Vandalism and other criminal practices have no part in the proper observance of Halloween.

Pearson Says

Prime Minister St. Laurent, in introducing a motion calling for support of Canada's U. N. and Pact policies, said the government would not regard a vote on the motion as one of confidence. This opened the way for a free vote or one in which party lines are forgotten.

Mr. St. Laurent said the government is not asking parliament to endorse any new foreign policies. But the government felt there should be some opportunity for the chamber to discuss the many decisions the government had been making in the spheres of the United Nations and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Approval of the motion would mean encouragement for the Canadian troops fighting in Korea and for those soon to join other N. A. T. O. forces in the peacetime defence of Europe against possible Communist aggression.

It also would be a further measure of support of ministers representing Canada at international meetings and be a demonstration to the world of the fundamental unity of the Canadian people.

Mr. St. Laurent asked External Affairs Minister Pearson to give members a review of the international situation.

Relations With U. S.

At the outset, Mr. Pearson referred to Canada's relations with the United States. He said the day-to-day problems of the two countries are growing in complexity, number and scope. Efforts were made to find fair and satisfactory conclusions.

Relations in defence and defence production were increasing as Canada's relations increased with members of the closely-knit North Atlantic treaty coalition. The U. S. was a great and powerful leader in that coalition.

But he added there was a fear that the U. S. might follow policies that other members of the coalition might not be able to follow. There also was a fear that the U. S. might reach a point where she would decide to "go it alone."

He believed it was Canada's duty to attempt to see that neither possibility occurred. Canada could not possibly isolate herself from U. S. policies.

Mr. Pearson criticized a suggestion by Howard Green (P.C.-Vancouver-Quadra) that Canada should take the lead in rebuilding the Commonwealth into a third world power.

That way, said Mr. Pearson, lay a centralized Commonwealth and, in time, a shattered Commonwealth. Canada wanted none of that. The Commonwealth worked best as a group of fully independent, fully co-operating nations.

Canada's "wariness" had been kept alive over past years by proposals for a central Commonwealth authority. Canada wanted none of this because such an authority might tend to have imperial motives and because it might hurt Canada's relations with the U. S.

Sportsmanship Of Holman's Team Praised

Mr. Charles Hogan, chairman of the Summerside baseball committee and manager of Holman's Intermediates which played last week in Middleton, N.S., for the Maritime Intermediate baseball championship, has received a very nice telegram from the Middleton manager in response to a wire of congratulations to the Middleton team for winning the championship. The telegram gives special praise to the sportsmanship shown by the Holman team and to the efficiency of Summerside umpires. It reads: "Thanks for telegram. Sorry both teams couldn't win. Your boys best bunch of sports ever to play in Middleton. Grand ball team and umpires you sent have no equal. Regards. C. M. Jourdrie."

Sport Echoes From Prince County

To Whom It May Concern

We're sorry that we made that quip. It was a dirty crack; That Joe Bernard had lost his zip.

We hereby take it back. He may have lost it for a while, but then a dying ember will sometimes burst into full flame; So those concerned, remember!

Joe's pitching in that second game with Middleton was reminiscent of his early greatness. He put his whole right arm, head and heart into the job, and the Middleton batters didn't have a chance. Joe's comeback was a source of great satisfaction to his many fans and well-wishers.

This Gord MacKay's a hitting wiz. His bingles are all honey; But when he gets to base he should mind and read the funnies. His twinkling toes have lots of zip. When all is done and said, But sometimes they hit such a clip That they outstrip his head.

We don't think Gordie will mind this bit of criticism. The boy has about everything it takes to be a ball player. We haven't seen the pitcher in the Maritimes that can muzzle that rampaging bat of his. He is one of the fastest and best outfielders among Maritime home-brews. His base-running, if toned down a little, would still bother the opposition plenty. But he sometimes forgets that on the way from home plate to home plate there are three safety stations where a fellow can hang around for a while exempt from tags. If and when he learns this, he will be tops in every department.

Sometimes a runner can steal home By virtue of surprise, But when it happens once, the boy Upon the mound gets wise.

Before he pitches after that, He turns and gives a look, That's why if two men pilfer home, It's one for Ripley's book.

Summerside Intermediates were never stronger offensively or weaker defensively than they were in Middleton. Their bats were beating out a fairly steady tune. But they broke all records for errors, both the king that go down in the sixth column in the box score, and the errors of judgment that are not found in the box score at all, but are remembered much longer by the fans.

The Summerside Intermediates have had a long and glorious reign as intermediate champions of the Maritimes. It couldn't go on indefinitely. They were beaten by a good club, but not by a better club, as we see it. The Summerside boys had the fourth intermediate championship right in their grasp. With the bases loaded in that tenth inning and only one out, old man "Law-of-Averages" pointed his stern finger at the boys and said, "Hey, you, on the top of that ladder, you have been kicking up your heels long enough. Come on down outa there!"

Joe Hunter hit that ball in the exact spot that made it possible to keep Holmans from clinching the championship. Almost any other kind of a hit would have sewed it up as Paul Schurman was tearing in and would have been hard to stop. The Middleton short stop, second baseman and first sacker played it perfectly, you have to give them credit. But it was Lady Luck who bounced that ball down to Parent on two easy hops so that somebody else could get a crack at the Maritime championship for a change.

O'Leary and Vicinity

Mrs. Claude MacNeill arrived at her home in O'Leary on Thursday night, Oct. 18th after an enjoyable visit to Boston, Mass.

On Thursday about 5:30 p. m. Oct. 18th fire completely destroyed a large straw stack on the farm of Eric MacNeill in West Devon. The fire was very close to the barn but the efforts of neighbors and friends combined to keep it from spreading and the wind was in the right direction in blowing the flames away from the large barn and the other buildings on the farm.

Brig. William W. Reid, D.S.O., E.D., of Charlottetown will be the special guest speaker at the O'Leary United Church on Armistice Sunday, Nov. 11th at 7:30 p. m. when a large flag will be dedicated in memory of six boys who paid the supreme sacrifice in World War Two namely: Garfield Ramsay, Wallace Dennis, Alfred Dennis, Ernest Trembeck, Reginald MacNeill and Edmond Campbell. The President of the O'Leary Legion, Lloyd Matthews of O'Leary, will read the Scripture. The Minister of the Church, Rev. W. G. Dickson will preside and members of the O'Leary Legion will attend the service.

Mr. William Duncan of the Kelly Road, near O'Leary Corner, who was a patient in the Prince County Hospital in Summerside has been very sick, has arrived back at his home. Mr. Duncan is feeling improved in health but has to go back to the hospital for a check-up this Saturday Oct. 20th. His many friends hope that soon he'll be feeling better again.

Mr. and Mrs. Urban Paugh, O'Leary Corner and son Keith have returned to their home on Monday, Oct. 15th after an enjoyable trip to Moncton, N. B.-A.Z.

Confirms Late Crossing Of Car Ferry

OTTAWA, Oct. 22 (Special)-Following negotiations with the Department of Transport and the Canadian National Railways, J. Watson MacNaught, parliamentary assistant to Fisheries Minister Mayhew, revealed tonight that the Department has authorized an additional late afternoon advertised crossing for the ferry "Abegweit".

Hitherto the latest advertised crossing from Borden has been at 4:30 in the afternoon. Starting immediately there will be an additional advertised crossing leaving Tormentine to return at 9:00 p. m.

Mr. MacNaught who has had numerous requests recently to seek extension of the ferry service said he felt the additional crossing will be of great benefit to shippers of perishable products particularly of fish.
