

In Search of the Green

by Laurie Reeves

This article is devoted to those students who are interested in pursuing their education beyond their undergraduate level achieved at UPEI. There is a display on scholarships for graduate study on one of the Pit Stop's bulletin boards and I hope those interested get a look at it. These awards are pretty specific and most are on a national level. There are many other awards available for those of you accepted in to Graduate School. For example, the Canadian Directory of Awards for Graduate Study, published by the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada, is designed to provide current information to Canadian graduate students looking for sources of financial aid. The revised 1987 edition is still not available, but the 1985 edition is very accurate. This book is found at Student Services.

I have decided to simply list the subject index to give you an idea of what there is available for further study: Accounting, Aerospace Studies, Agricultural Engineering, Agriculture, Animal Science, Anthropology, apiculture, Area Studies, Art Education, Art History, Astronomy, Biology, Business Administration, Chemistry, Commerce, Consumer Studies, Dentistry, Earth Sciences, Economics, Education, Engineering, English, Family Studies, Finance, Food Services, Forestry, Geography, Geology, Gerontology, History, Horticultural Science, Hydrology, Industrial Relations, International Studies, Journalism, Kinesiology, Law, Library Science, Marine Science, Mathematics, Medicine, Meteorology, Museology, Music, Nursing, Nutrition, Ophthalmology, Optometry, Pharmacy, Philosophy, Physiotherapy, Planning, Political Science, Poultry Science, Psychiatry, Psychology, Public Administration, social work, Sociology, Surveying, Theology, transportation, Veterinary Medicine, Zoology.

Whew!!!!!!

I realize that this information may be too late for some of you, but I should think that it will be fairly helpful for most of you even if you are early in your undergraduate university career. There are Graduate Study Awards under several categories: General Awards, Pure and Applied Science, Pure Science, Applied Science, Humanities and Social Science, Agricultural Science, Education, Fine Arts and Health Sciences. My advice is that you look into these matters soon. Remember that the "Search for the Green" begins with you.

CIAU considers drug testing for university athletes

OTTAWA (CUP)

— Canada's top university sports authority is considering a nation-wide program of random drug tests for university football players.

Under instruction from Sport Canada, the Canadian Interuniversity Athletic Union (CIAU) set up an ad-hoc committee recently that must decide by June whether a program is necessary. The tests would look for abuse of "performance enhancing drugs", such as steroids, by football players.

The committee must first find out the extent of drug use among university athletes before deciding to go ahead with a testing program, according to Bob Pugh, CIAU executive vice-president and head of the committee.

But Keith Harris, athletic director at Carleton University and a committee member, said testing up to 7,000 players at $250 per test may be prohibitive. And he added that the tests may not be reliable.

"Some days a guy may be good (negative) and other days he could be shown bad (positive) depending on when he last used a drug," he said.

The CIAU has not decided how it would punish players that tested positive if they implemented the tests.

"We must consider whether to punish just the individual or the team too," Harris said.

He said punishing an entire team because one player tests positive might "put some teeth" into a program.

Carleton football coach Ace Powell said though drug abuse by athletes is far less common in Canada than in the US, testing may be necessary for football players as soon as they start university.

"Some of these students out of high school would rather use the drugs than build up naturally," he said. "I think testing is the ultimate education for the players."
