P.W.C. Principal Reviews Year; Sees Change Needed

"It is my pleasure once again to extend a cordial welcome to Convocation to the parents and friends of our students," said Dr. Frank MacKinnon, in his 1958-59 Principal's convocation address. This day marks the passing of another year of experience for our young people and it is always gratifying to have present at this ceremony the parents who have sacrificed much toward providing opportunities for their children.

"We congratulate the students on their year's work. Many have done very well, and the proportion of honour students remains high. This year's pass lists includes many who will be heard from again as they carry their undoubted talents and qualities into later life.

AUTOMATIC GRADING

"Others have not done well. For some the trouble is faulty preparation through years of automatic grading and accumulation of weaknesses until the inevitable demands of more advanced work make progress difficult. For others the trouble is an old disease, not peculiar to students by any means, in the form of chronic attacks of mental laziness, or a comparatively modern disease, again not peculiar to students, in the form of social jitters brought on by a restless desire to participate in too many things at once. The remedy for these weaknesses is patient review, concentration and hard work.

"There is a tendency in some circles to 'view with alarm' the ideas and activities of this generation's young people. I think that school of thought had better concern itself with the weaknesses of its own generation, for our young people today are well able to stand any comparison with those who went before. At Prince of Wales we have seen in our student body all the fine qualities of responsibility, leadership, common sense, work and sportsmanship. Indeed, I congratulate them on their conduct and their cooperation which has done much for them and for college life.

STUDENT COUNCIL

"I should like to pay special tribute to the Student Council. Under able officers that body has conducted student business and affairs with skill and judgment

EDUCATIONAL HORIZONS

Loyalty And Co-Operators Are Essential To Teachers

(This is the last of the series dealing with the Code of Ethics of the Prince Edward Island Teachers' Federation. This section discusses "Teacher - Teacher" relations, and has been prepared by Miss Etta MacDonald, teacher, Birchwood Junior High School.)

In discussing each of the phases of our professional code of ethics it has become my task to present that phase which deals with Teacher-Teacher relations. I should like to divide this topic into two headings; the first, dealing with Teacher-Principal relations; the second, with relations between classroom teachers.

TEACHER-PRINCIPAL

In dealing with the first heading (that of teacher-principal relations) both the classroom teacher and the principal should realize the responsibilities of each. We teachers should recognize what a great and complex task is administration in our schools today, and it is our duty to cooperate with our principal in order that this task be done so that the school will operate as a smoothly run unit. This co-operation and loyalty will then produce an environment in which each staff member will put forth his or her best effort for the good of the children in our care.

On the other hand, the principal is the professional head of the school and is accountable for its success. To quote from "The Effective School Principal" by Jacobson, Reavis, and Logsdon, "It is reasonable that teachers prefer to work under the principal who knows good teaching, prizes judiciously, and stimulates teachers to improve."

No teacher is so perfect that improvement is impossible, and it should be the duty of the principal to evaluate the work of the teacher and assist where necessary. We teachers must be willing to accept fair and unbiased evaluation and strive to improve so that we may best perform the duty entrusted to us—that of the education of the whole child.

TEACHER-TEACHER

Concerning the second heading, that of teacher-teacher relations, and clearly showed the possibilities and advantages of sending boys, and especially under privileged ones, to Summer camps. The speaker was introduced by the Rev. Alexander MacKay, and tendered the thanks of the gathering by the president, Gene Spicer.

The meeting opened with a hymn sing, conducted by Verdun Paynter, with the Rev. L.M. Murray at the piano. Scripture was read by James Murphy and Harry Brown led in prayer. Leaman Caseley read the minutes of the last meeting and Nelson Caseley read the financial report.

A previously appointed nominating committee of Sterling Millar, Fenton Mayne and Robert Carruthers presented the following names as the slate of officers for 1959-60 viz: Honorary president, the Rev. Alexander MacKay; president, Allison Mayne; vice-president, Willard Stewart; secretary, Ivan Daye; treasurer, George Stewart. On motion of Harold Laird and Harry Brown this report was adopted. Cedric Seaman tendered a vote of thanks to the retiring president and executive.

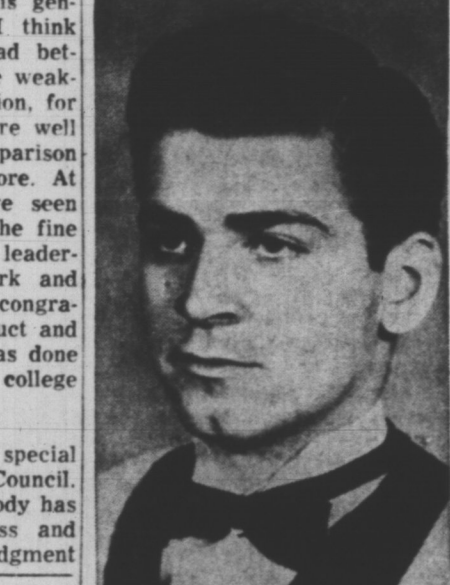

As this was ladies night, a large number of wives were in attendance and were welcomed at the door by Peter Willadsen and Verdun Paynter. The men presided over the refreshment hour, and capably served ice cream and cake as well as completing a clean-up job in the kitchen.

Everett Donald showed a picturesque National Film Board film, "Beyond the Peace" set near Fort St. John on the Alaskan Highway and the meeting closed with benediction pronounced by the Rev. L. M. Murray.
