FROM THE FRONT

By PIUS CALLAGHAN

Top umpires Quit

BASEBALL lost one of its top umpires Sunday when Al Barick decided to call it quits in National League official.

Apparently lack of backing and supervision from the league is what bothered Barick. The balk question has completely upset and he's likely one of the main causes in his resignation.

In the American League the umpires work under a league supervisor of umpires, Joe Lushba, who was himself former umpire. There's no such arrangement in the National loop and the officials work under president Giles.

This apparently was not to Barick's liking and it undoubtedly aggravated matters.

At any rate, he was out at the time of this writing but there appeared to be a good chance that the troubled waters would be calmed.

Just how we don't yet know but the league can hardly afford to lose one of Barick's ability.

Happens Too Often

IT IS too bad that top officials in sports become disgraced and leave their jobs. In hockey we have the cases of Roy "Red" Sneyd and Eddie Power two of the game's best in recent years. Their cry was that the top brass were not giving them the support they deserved. Now both Barick, one of baseball's best, and a story-power act.

We don't think the official is infallible but we do believe that these men are trying their mightiest to do a good job. There will never come a time when they satisfy everybody. Some on every team always know much more (in their own minds) than do the paid officials. The trouble is that these owners have listened to in some cases and the officials are put down.

Disregard for authority is fast becoming a smart thing to do in sports and a necessary one to many home fans who they are smart against officials. You can expect umpires and referees to take only so much of this cheap talk.

There comes a time when they've had enough. Perhaps Barick feels he can stand no more.

Burdette To St. Louis

THE hero of the 1957 world series is no longer in Milwaukee.

Law is 6-5 for the present season but the thing that is most noteworthy is that he has won his last five games. The Cardinals, very much pennant conscious, believe that Burdette can deliver a much more certain contender. Naturally, if Law wins his winning ways, you will have to consider the Red birds a strong contender for National League honors.

Burdette has loads of ability and plenty of self assurance. He almost talked himself out of the Cardinals in 1957 and he let them know in no uncertain terms that he just loved to pitched against them.

He would dearly love to leave Milwaukee but he figured there was a good chance of him being traded. He is anxious to get to work for his new club and he promises to go down to help the Cardinals along the victory trail.

It could be that six years later Lew finds himself in another world series against the Yankees. The difference would be that he will be the pitcher for the Yankees.

He would dearly love to get another crack at the New York Yankees. Perhaps he could still show some mastery over them. All of which will be very interesting to the fans of the American League and Cards emerging top dogs in the senior circuit.

Burdette Hopes He Is Missed

MILWAUKEE (AP) — "I just hope someone misses me."

So spoke pitcher Lew Burdette after he was traded to St. Louis Cardinals by Milwaukee Braves for catcher-outfielder-trader Gene Alley and minor league hurler Bob Sadovski.

"I guess I got caught in the 'pitcher movement' by the Braves for 12 years. Admitting I was disappointed in the trade, I'm leaving a lot of friends behind," — and not only on the field.

Looking ahead, he added: "It is a awful nice to be going to a contender. There they don't care how old you are — or how much money you're making. All that matters is that you pitch."

Manager Johnny Keane of the second-place Cardinals said Burdette would be used mostly as a starter.

PITCHING SPOTTY Burdette would most to exactly fill the needs of the Cardinals, who's pitching has been marked by spots by pitchers and injuries.

Milwaukee general manager John McHale said Oliver and Sadovski fill the Braves' needs. "It's come up with a right-hander," McHale said. "Burdette — both with potential."

Burdette became one of baseball's biggest names while in the 1957 world series. From being the Braves to the world champion Yankees in three years, he has a career record of 179 victories and 120 defeats and has averaged 19 victories for six seasons by spot pitching.

His list of records includes a 10-10, non-run victory over Philadelphia Phillies three years ago. He is 6-5 for the current season.

McHale explained the trade. McHale said: "Burdette is a great pitcher and he is the second highest salaried pitcher in the National League (earning a reported $50,000 a year). Warren Spahn is the only one being paid more but Burdette's salary wasn't the consideration in our dealing with him. We're putting emphasis on younger players."
