Religious Tolerance.

The tendency has been toward sectarian organization in Christian work. But with this tendency has been another, to make the work itself more Christian and less sectarian. Methodists, Baptists, Congregationalists, Presbyterians, do their work in un denominational. No longer do Arminians and Calvinists bombard each other from their respective pulpits. A sectarian sermon is rare, even in a Roman Catholic or a high church Episcopal pulpit, and a sermon leveled against another sect is still more rare. The churches are separated, but the doctrine is one. The reader can easily satisfy himself of the truth of this observation. Let him take up a Monday morning's paper and read the reports of the previous Sunday's sermons and then endeavor, without any acquaintance with the preachers, to determine to what denominations they respectively belong, or, if he have acquaintance with the preachers, let him analyze the sermons and endeavor to designate to himself the features in any sermon which are characteristically Presbyterian or Congregational or Baptist or Unitarian. Except in the utterances of a few polemical divines, relics of a past age, he will find it difficult so to do. Ministers preach in denominational pulpits, but they proclaim one and the same Christian message.—Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott in Forum.

Around London on a Wheel.

I suppose we—J. and I, that is—had already made a dozen plans for a holiday, when suddenly we found we could not stay away from London long enough to manage the least little tour of them all. It was then the idea came to us to circumnavigate London. In the first place, the circular journey could be made in sections. With town for a center, we could train or wheel to any given point, ride for one day, two days, three days, according to the limits of our leisure, train back and wait for the next chance to be off again. In the second place, we were sure of as much beauty and variety as if we had traveled half across Europe, for of course our circle was to be very much wider than that taken by either district or metropolitan railway. We meant to get beyond the town, beyond its sordid suburbs, into the surrounding country, which, within a 20 or 30 mile radius of Charing Cross, is as lovely as any in England.—Elizabeth Robins Pennell in Harper's Magazine.

How Wings Work.

Professor Pettigrow's investigations proved what more recent observers have confirmed—namely, that all natural wings, whether of insect, bat or bird, act on the same principle—that of a screw. When the bodies of flying creatures are fixed, the wings, striking downward and forward and upward and forward in alternate down and up strokes, describe what are called figure eight tracks in space.

Testimonial

C. P. Fletcher, Esq.

DEAR SIR,—I do not wish to return to Montreal without expressing my gratitude to you for the very excellent Bell Piano that you placed at my disposal for my recital. I have tried many Canadian Pianos of different manufacturers and must say that, considering the size of the instrument, I have never found one to equal it for depth and brilliancy of tone. The action is quite as elastic and responsive as in American Upright Pianos of the highest grade. Again thanking you, very sincerely,

I remain, Yours, FRED. E. MORRIS
