

that there was no time she could have escaped from Starkweather "without endangering the lives of others."

Caril's story contradicted Starkweather's version, given in court earlier, that she was a willing helper through the killings.

Seaway Opening Not Yet Decided

OTTAWA (CP)—Lt. Gen. H. D. Graham indicated Monday that no decision has been made yet regarding the time and the place that Queen Elizabeth and President Eisenhower will meet for next summer's official opening of the St. Lawrence Seaway.

The general, recently appointed commissioner in charge of royal visit arrangements, said in an interview that one or two "very informal" talks have been held with U.S. representatives regarding these matters.

CONSIDERING JET SERVICE LONDON (Reuters)—A spokesman for British Overseas Airways Corporation said Saturday the firm is considering inaugurating a Comet IV jet airliner service from London to Montreal.

Helped Killer Because Of Fear, Girl Says

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP)—Caril Ann Fugate insisted under cross-examination Monday she helped mass killer Charles Starkweather only because he commanded her and because she feared for her life and the lives of others.

"He told me to," she said repeatedly when asked by prosecutor Elmer Scheele why she performed chores connected with the string of killings which already has brought a death sentence to the 19-year-old Starkweather.

Caril, 15, is being tried on a charge she aided and abetted Starkweather in one of the 11 killings attributed to him and therefore is equally guilty of first-degree murder. The charge involves the slaying of Robert Jensen, Bennet, Neb., school boy.

She has steadfastly maintained awareness of the momentum that may be gathering force out of sight and beyond her ken.

Processes are slow, very slow. Mountains are levelled before our eyes, lakes are disappearing, rivers are changing their course, and it is all taking place so gradually that we do not in a short lifetime, see it all happen. It is the slow, steady unspectacular force that counts, persistent and undimmed by apparent setbacks.

So it is with all of us, for we are part of nature. There is an ebb and flow in human progress, but over the long ages the movement is upwards. And so it will continue to be if we go about our tasks with courage and hope.

FAITH NEEDED It is that kind of faith we need in the teaching profession. There are many times when it would seem that no painful inch is gained. But one cannot be fully aware of the momentum that may be gathering force out of sight and beyond her ken.

Incomplete high school—a situation which has pertained in this province.

EXIGENCIES No other profession, for men or for women, has this low standard of professional qualifications. Until a much higher level of training is demanded and obtained, the status of the profession will remain, and remain deservedly, low.

I am fully aware of the present exigency with reference to the supply of teachers and I trust that the steps that have had to be taken are only temporary measures.

The training of children—one of the most difficult and important arts—needs able, well disciplined minds to guide and direct. It is necessary that the public appreciate this fact, and plan accordingly.

What has been said is not to imply that no teachers take part in community activities which have no direct relationship to professional duties.

Many do, and their numbers are increasing. It is significant that many leaders in our Government were teachers. What has been said points the way to greater public service, and thereby to enhance status.

There are so few people who are willing to give their time to it.

REWARDS OFFERED What of the rewards that the teaching profession offers? And first what of the financial rewards? They are low, as compared with the professions of law and medicine; high as compared with that of the Christian ministry.

Teachers have done much through their own organizations to impress on the public mind and on school trustees the need for a better financial status, and much has been achieved.

In some directions more has got to be done.

It is a case that a young teacher with the bare minimum of training is, as a rule, earning all that she is worth as an initial salary, and more than she could have earned in any other field with similar training.

It is not the case, however, that well trained and able teachers earn as much as they should, but progressive school boards are more and more inclined to put weight on ability and superior training in establishing higher grades of salary level.

Even under the best conditions teaching is not a lucrative undertaking, and no one who enters the ranks of the teachers is under any delusion in the matter.

THRILL But there are compensations. The great thrill that comes to a teacher, and that more than counterbalances many hours of tiredness and despondency, is when a former pupil comes to tell him that what he, the teacher, said and was had meant much to him, his pupil.

There is no greater satisfaction than unbidden tribute from some one who years ago had been a small boy or girl in the classroom.

Life becomes worthwhile one knows that for the one who is impelled to speak there are many who are too shy or who lack the opportunity to express their gratitude.

The teacher's job is to mould the minds and the hearts at a time when such moulding is still possible. What is accomplished can never be fully known.

Even under the most adverse conditions some seed is planted. Remember Arthur Clough's lines: "For while the three waves vainly break here no painful inch to gain."

For back through creeks and inlets making Comes silent, flooding in the main."

EDUCATIONAL HORIZONS

Teachers And Teaching

By Malcolm MacKenzie, Deputy Minister and Director of Education

The most important thing about the teaching profession is the qualities that make a good teacher. Probably the best way to get some appreciation of what these qualities are is to think about those who were our own best teachers, and consider why they were so good.

HER PRAYER There was the Grade I teacher whose classroom was always a pleasure to visit because it was so evident that the children in it loved their teacher and she in turn loved all her pupils regardless of the station in life of their parents.
