"I won't sell him!" Peter observed this morning, somewhat disturbed by the sight of a livestock buyer's truck parked in the yard. At the moment we were looking in over the half-door of the building we call "the tractor-house", where the band of ewes and the one lambkin are penned. The latter was nursing then, his wagging tail signifying to the knowing, that with him all was well.

"You couldn't very well now, could you?" we reminded him, in the forecast. Supposing a

U-Tote-M Stores May Be Coming Back To Suburbs

By RICHARD F. WHALEN
NEW YORK (AP)—Remember the old corner grocery store before the days of supermarkets? Those "mom and pop" stores may be making a comeback.

Nowadays they call them convenience stores, bantams or superettes and their trade organization says they're sprouting in neighborhoods across the United States.

Mom and pop, plus a part-time helper, could run one of them; but they'd probably need a cram course in modern merchandising methods.

Gone is the cracker barrel and long wooden counter. It's all drive-in, self-service and fast check-out.

The idea is to catch the housewife when she runs out of something between weekly trips to the supermarket.

The key to success seems to be the right location (near new housing in the suburbs and apartment projects), long hours (seven days a week when laws permit) and a carefully selected stock of fast-moving goods such as dairy and bakery products and beverages.

EARN MILLIONS
The average sale is about $1, but the annual gross for all such stores in the U.S. totals more than $1,000,000,000, says the National Association of Convenience Stores.

The association counts more than 5,000 in operation now—double the number five years ago. Most are in the South and Southwest.

The average number of employees is 2½. The hours usually are 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. There's parking for six to 10 cars. Some of the buildings, somewhat larger than a gasoline station, are strikingly designed with tent-like or cantilevered roofs.

They sport names like U-Tote-M, L'I General Stores, and Quick Trip.

Most of the bantams belong to chains that hire managers to run them. The biggest is the Bedeque Club.

The January meeting of the Bedeque "Half Century" club was held at the home of Mrs. Percy Affleck.

In the absence of the president, Mr. Walter Leard, who is in the Prince County Hospital, the vice president, Mrs. Affleck chaired the meeting.

Mrs. Orville Johnson read the opening poem "Look for the Best" and ten members answered roll call with selections of poetry.

The minutes of the last meeting were read, and treasurer, Mrs. George Henderson, gave a report of the year's finances and activities.

The program was conducted by Mrs. Percy Affleck and Mrs. Carrie Leard, and consisted of a questionnaire and a contest.

Next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. George Henderson, who, with Mrs. Charles Henderson, will look after the program.

Refreshments were served by the hostess.

Education Program In U.S. Is Record

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson has sent Congress a record $1,600,000,000 educational program, with an open invitation to private and parochial schools to take part.

The proposed program, with heavy emphasis on the children of low-income families, is the heaviest presidential outlay yet in what Johnson calls his war against poverty in the United States.

But the provisions for non-public schools to share in the benefits seem certain to trigger a bitter fight on Capitol Hill.

Even before the details were laid before Congress, it was learned, the group known as "Protestants and other Americans united for separation of church and state," made known its opposition.

However, it also was learned that the Roman Catholic hierarchy generally approves, and so do some officials of the National Education Association, which has opposed the use of public funds for non-public schools.

The program would provide assistance to pre-school youngsters in the slums, elementary and secondary school pupils in poor areas and college scholarships and other help for worthy and needy high school graduates.

The program would provide for fiscal 1966:

1. Public schools: $1,000,000,000 for elementary and secondary schools serving children from families with less than $2,000 annual income. There are an estimated 5,000,000 such children and 85-90 per cent of the school districts in the U.S. will qualify for assistance. Public and private schools would be urged to cooperate in shared-time programs and other joint use of new facilities.

2. Higher education: $200,000,000 to provide 140,000 scholarships, partial payment of interest on guaranteed private loans to college students, assistance to small colleges, improved teacher-training programs and university-community extension programs.

3. Pre-school: $150,000,000 to eradicate the handicaps with which slum children start

Lucky Maud Film Will Be Shown
A most interesting CBC film entitled "A Memorial Diary of Lucy Maud" will be shown on Monday evening, January 18, at 8 p.m. at Cavendish United Church Christian Education Hall.

Jill Birtwistle, daughter of Commander K. and Mrs. Birtwistle of Cavendish, played the role of "Anne of Green Gables" and many other Islanders are included in the cast.

The film was produced here last summer, and as many inquiries have been received, it was felt that Islanders would enjoy seeing it, and it has been procured on loan from the CBC. A number of other films will be shown along with the feature.

Thresher Probe Indicates Some Practices Under Par

WASHINGTON (AP)—A U.S. congressional committee that investigated the sinking of the atomic submarine Thresher said here practices and standards in some of her construction were "short of those required" for safe operation.

Some witnesses blamed the pressures for fast construction of the atomic submarine fleet for the deficiencies found.

Both the joint committee on atomic energy and the navy said there have been substantial revisions of these and other procedures and practices in nuclear submarine building as a result of the committee and navy board investigations.

The committee used its findings on previously-secret testimony taken in hearings held at different times over the last two years. The Thresher was lost in April 1963 with 129 men aboard.

Testimony included that by Vice-Admiral H. G. Rickover, pioneer in nuclear power for submarines and other navy ships, who said:

1. In recent years, "several conventional, came close to being lost" because of defects in design, workmanship, improper use of material and faulty inspection procedures.

2. A spot check of pipe joints in the non-nuclear part of the Thresher was made before she left for her last voyage after overhaul and "if the quality of the joints so inspected was representative of all the Thresher's silver-brazed joints, this means that the ship had several hundred sub-standard joints when she last went to sea."

Like the findings made by a navy court of inquiry after the Thresher sank April 10, the committee said the specific cause of the sinking is not known.

But the committee's report narrowed the focus of suspicion down to the method of connecting pipes which entered from the outside of the hull and which were under tremendous pressure in deep submergence.

Ottawa To Aid Restoring Historic Kingston City Hall

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal government will help restore the face of the historic old city hall of Kingston, Ont., built in the 1840s for the Parliament of Canada. Privy Council President George McMillan announced here.

The announcement was made on the eve of the 110th anniversary of the birth of Sir John A. Macdonald Canada's first prime minister, who entered politics as a Kingston city alderman in 1843.

The city hall was started in 1841 when Kingston was the capital of the United Provinces of Canada East and West, now Quebec and Ontario. In 1845, however, before the building was completed, the capital was moved to Montreal.

Macdonald, born in Glasgow, and whose parents emigrated to Canada in 1820, was present as a newly-elected alderman at the laying of the cornerstone for the building by Governor Charles Metcalfe. Parliament then held its sessions in a converted hospital building.

The huge city hall was built to house not only the city offices, but a market, post office, science and language laboratories, summer schools, programs and teachers for handicapped children, and accelerated programs for the gifted.

The total price tag of $1,600,000 is for one year only, although some programs are scheduled for three years and others five. Administration sources declined to forecast what will be asked for in the years ahead, but many Washington sources believe the annual cost will soon be at least $1,000,000.
