IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of DANIEL N. WARD who passed away November 9, 1946.

Deep in our hearts lies a picture, Of a loved one gone to rest. In memory's frame we shall keep it Because he was one of the best. Sweet memories will linger forever. Time cannot change them. It's true years that may come cannot sever Our loving remembrance of you.

IN MEMORIAM

In fond and loving memory of my dear husband, Dougald Mac Donald who passed away on November 9th, 1946.

Do not ask us if we forget him. He was always kind and true. Never murmured over suffering. No one knew what he went through.

Always Remembered by His Wife and Family.

Railway Observance Of Remembrance Day

MONCTON N. B. Nov. 8 — In line with other years, General district and divisional offices on the Atlantic Region of the Canadian National Railways will be closed in observance of Remembrance Day, November 11, according to an announcement by W. E. Robinson, regional vice President and general manager. All other departments will continue working as usual, including stations and freight sheds which will remain open to the public, except that employees who have served overseas will be permitted to take time off in order to participate in Remembrance Day Observances.

The two minute period of silence commencing at 11.00 A.M. will be strictly observed by employees on duty except that trains will not be stopped.

LONDON, Nov. 8 — (Reuters) — The Labor Government lost a House of Commons vote tonight by 235 votes to 229, but the issue was not a policy matter over which it would have to resign. The House upheld a proposal by Conservative Kenneth Pickthorn that individual members should have the right to 10 minutes of parliamentary time before debates to introduce legislation.

Literature And Life

SHELLEY'S ODE TO THE WEST WIND

A few years ago there was a novel published which had a great sale and the title was "If Winter Comes." This title was taken from the last line of Shelley's Ode, named above. The whole line is "If Winter comes, can Spring be far behind?" This ode is one of the most finished products of Shelley's pen and mind. It is actually made up of five sonnets in the Shakespearean form — four quatrains and a couplet at the close. Shelley had certain eccentricities as a writer, for instance we are told (and a reading of his poems confirms this) that he was very fond of the lizard, and frequently puts it in his verse. In this poem of five sonnets he refers to the leaf in every one of the five.

During the last week or two we have noticed the fallen leaves blown about by gusts of wind and I never see drifting leaves but Shelley's lines come into my mind — "O wild West Wind, thou breath of Autumn's being, Thou from whose unseen presence the leaves dead Are driven like ghosts from an enchanter fleeing, Yellow, and black, and pale and hectic red, Pestilence-stricken multitudes."

Do they not seem as though from an enchanter fleeing as they rush along the street? This quotation is from verse one. Verse two has these words — "Loose clouds like earth's decaying leaves are shed, shook from the tangled boughs of heaven and ocean." In verse three we read, "The sea blooms and the oozy woods which wear The sapless foliage of the ocean know Thy voice."

The first line of verse four is, "If I were a dead leaf thou mightest bear" . . . and later in the same verse we have "Oh! lift me as a wave a leaf a cloud I fall upon the thorns of life! I bleed!" Then in the closing section we have these pathetic lines: "Make me thy lyre, even as the forest is; That if my leaves are falling like its own? Drive my dead thoughts over the universe Like withered leaves, to quicken a new birth."

Perhaps he had in mind the words of the Bible which says: "we all do fade as a leaf." His words were written on leaves and "are ashes and sparks."

Shelley's life was a sad one. It was he who said, "We learn in suffering what we teach in song," and "the sweetest songs are those which tell of saddest thought." He was essentially a lyric poet, and was as musical as a bird; he was too a reformer and had a programme for the betterment of mankind. Like a great many more he was misunderstood.
