Floats, Bands, Girls Mark Miscouche Day

SUMMERISIDE — Under sunny skies Miscouche celebrated its centennial day Tuesday.

Festivities were highlighted by a mile-long parade of wide appeal, and the official opening of the new Acadian Museum.

The parade, which saw about 60 units, including 20 floats, got off to a start shortly after 2 p.m.

Variety was the keynote this year in parade planning. Besides modern, colorfully designed and imaginative floats, and numerous pretty girls in convertible, there were floats that depicted bygone years, which showed much originality.

The smart-stepping Summeride Majorettes led the parade. Bands were the Miscouche Band and the band of the Royal Canadian Dragoons.

Children paced a number of floats, to give the parade added appeal. The Summeride and Miscouche fire departments were represented by gleaming fire engines; there were smartly-stepping horses, and horse-drawn vehicles of a half century ago, also a variety of farm animals.

Giving the parade an added variety was an assortment of comic characters and clowns, which appealed to the fun-loving Many of the floats in the parade were seen for the first time after Miscouche had been represented in other centres earlier.

Floats were entered from Charlottetown, Summeride, Borden, Crapaud and St. Nicholas.

One float which was entered and failed to make it to the centennial day celebrations, was the Summeride Lions and Lionettes float. This float was caught by the wind en route, and received damage which prevented its appearance in the parade.
