DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

AXYDLBAAXB
L LONGFLAEB
One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

(By Thornton W. Burgess)

FOOTPRINTS IN THE SAND
In the sands of time we're making footprints all the way. So for good or ill recording, All we do each passing day. —All of us.

Teeter the Spotted Sandpiper was a long, long way from the Smiling Pool where he had spent last summer raising a family, flying up and down Laughing Brook, and visiting the Big River. By early flights, with many stops, he had come down along the shore of the Great Ocean to the Land-of-always-summer where in the Great Ocean were many islands, some very big, some very small; some with rocky shores and some with smooth beaches. He had stopped on some islands for short visits. Some he had not visited at all. He was getting impatient now. He knew where he was going, and

BRIDGE AT ITS WORST

Today's column might well be titled: "How Not to Bid and Play."
South dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

This deal occurred in a duplicate game. Five of the eight North-South pairs bid up to the super-sound contract of six clubs; and one pair speculated with six no-trump, achieving success by declarer's guessing the spade queen's location.

At two tables, however, the North players were excessively conservative, and this was the auction:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	Pass (1)	Pass

It does seem that North might have bid three clubs over one spade; or, failing that, he might have carried on past the game level!

However, at one of these tables, South failed to fulfill the contract, low though it was! West opened the heart queen. South won with the king, cashed the diamond ace, then ruffed a diamond in dummy. After making this really terrible play, he sealed his own doom by cashing the trump king, then taking the spade finesse. West won and led another heart — and now South could not even get out of dummy without shortening his own trump! The final result was a one-trick defeat, and "bottom on the board!"

Since this pair had failed to bid a slam, they couldn't have earned many match-points, no matter how well South played the four-spade contract — but he should have taken all 13 tricks, as the fortunate by-product of the correct safety play! That safety play, after winning the first trick with the heart king, was to cash the ace and king of trumps! Naturally, South couldn't know that the queen would drop — but suppose it didn't? He would then go on his way, running clubs, letting the enemy win their two spade tricks as they liked, and at least assuring himself that he would make five-odd.
