

MARY HAWORTH

Politician's Wife Tries To Condone His Affair

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: As I have two daughters and a son of my own, I am especially struck by Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Halsted's "So what?" attitude as told by the press, in follow-up news stories about FDR's 30 years' reported romance and the related fact that a divorce would have scuttled his political career.

My politician husband must run again in the November election, and although I have tried to be an asset to him and indeed have been, in his political climb there is another woman in the picture now. She manages his campaign in a fairly big city back home.

Of course he doesn't want a divorce with an election coming up. But I am asking myself, "Why should I keep up a front so that 30 years hence, my children can say to gossip, 'So what?' Would that make me a heroine or a sap?"

I have no wish to be an international go-gooder or a syndicated columnist on the basis of my husband's success. But I would like to think I am a wife on better ground than "we can't get a divorce and fuel more scandal with an election coming on."

I want to be more in my husband's life than cook and nursemaid to his children; and believe me, I have been. But if, with all my efforts, I don't fill the bill and this other tigress does, what am I to do? Martyr myself?

The upcoming election won't be a shoo-in; already a whispering campaign is under way about the affair; and he makes no promise to break it off. I don't care to hang on just for the honor of being his widow.

I am young, attractive, capable of earning my own living. I was capable of helping him through law school when three babies were coming along. After the present nightmare campaign is over, he's on his own. Am I cold blooded or merely human? Sincerely, R. G.

DEAR R. G.: You are blinded with pain and confusion at this writing. You have lost perspective, momentarily, on the long haul that marriage is, or was meant to be, namely: A partnership "until death do us part." You can't see the forest for the trees just now. Let's have a try at restoring your perspective.

The religiously oriented marriage is vested with a clearer concept than you presently possess, of the problems implicit in the married state.

The religious betrothal, where by the bride and groom invoke God's blessing on the union, takes into account the frailty of human nature, especially the individual's some time inability of human nature, especially the individual's some time inability to do the good that he will do while falling into sins that a better nature would prefer to avoid.

Mindful of this tragic bias in human nature, the God-conscious bride and groom take care to include God as the unifying force in their relationship, so that continuously they may expect, receive and cooperate with His grace in "making the marriage work", as the phrase is.

Possibly you've forgotten, assuming you've never taught, that God does specifically help those who look faithfully to Him. Or, I penetrate your confusion from a different approach, the late Lord Byron said it all from the pragmatic view, in noting that "Man's love is of man's life a thing apart; 'tis woman's whole existence."

In this existentialist sense, your husband is totally committed to his political projects. Meanwhile, your basic job as his dutifully at keeping the marriage a going concern.

It is your role in his life, in this respect, that the tigress back home is trying to usurp, via "political" action. My advice is, don't let her have it, don't let her opportunist maneuver bring drive you to the folly of cutting off your nose to spite your face.

In my book, a wife is not necessarily either a heroine or a sap if she proceeds steadfastly to do her best to try to bring her marriage intact through storms that threaten to sink the bark. Let's say rather that she is a valiant woman. M. H.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Autumn's Signature Seen In The Scarlet Maples

By making use only of the spare minutes, it is amazing what fine progress the project of building now in hand at Alerlea, has made. The frame of this extension to the polebarn up the fields' lane is now in place. And how attractive it is in its exact lines, though the builders are inclined to discount this, saying, "Oh, it's not perfect at all. She's likely a mile out here or there." The loft, a roomy area where bales of hay and straw are to be stored has been floored. Peter opened a door in the barn to have us see the collection of hardware, the shining spikes and nails in various lengths and sizes, now on call there. He drew a long breath at the sight, and rather wistfully. And we thought of lads of the name before him who had learned to do by doing and in the process had carried off to you a project of carpentry many a nail and board and shingle. He too should become familiar with the craft. We would mention this to the farmers today.

Mack is still absent from the family circle, and will be through the week, while he presents his animals in competition at yet another Maritime Fair. Tonight to the coverlet in Alex's bed is smoothly drawn over the pillows. There is no light in the window to indicate to the folks at this house that he reads as his wont, before he wanders away into some young and pleasant land of sleep. This weekend, he visits with a cousin on a farm, a few communities over from this. When we first knew it, besides its run of fertile fields, it had an interesting patch of old orchard, where possibly the first twinkle had been. It was a sheltered quiet spot, where it seemed to us, even then, Time stood still. The farmer tilled the fields about but allowed nature to take over there, as if in its history it was too sacred to be disturbed.

There the blossoms came back each springtime to the gnarled trees. And with them, the birdsong. Robins nested. Squirrels chirr-ed. And in season, girls and boys found quaint, sweet old-time fruitings on the boughs.

Farms are more exact now. Hedgerows and old orchards, and groves have been removed in many an instance to make room for the operation of the great machines that now cultivate and harvest the fields. Gone too are the old hollow pine stumps once the loved play-houses, or stores. Landmarks of once on the fields these sometimes were. "You come to that old stump-you can't miss it" one would say-giving directions for a shortcut across farms. "Climb the fence there, and the lane you find will bring you right to the house!"

"There was once a great pine stump there" we will not be passing, where now clovers bloom in summer.

"A what?" one of the young fry will query.

"A great pine stump" we reply, knowing full well he or she can never picture as on those days that are now no more. And up woods' roads now the sweet ferns are ripening. And in the maples - have you noticed? Autumn commences to write there her name.

Until tomorrow - - - Diary - - - Good-night. . .

MR. AND MRS. VICTOR RAMSAY

A Pretty Summer Wedding Is Held In North Bedeque

Annie Louise Farrar became the bride of Victor Lea Ramsay in a summer wedding at North Bedeque United Church in August. Baskets of mixed summer flowers were arranged at the altar for the double ring ceremony which was performed by Rev. G. Walls, Summerside.

Beulah Mosse was organist and accompanied Greg MacLean as he sang "O Father all-creating" before the ceremony, and "I'll Walk Beside You" during the signing of the register. The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Farrar, Wilnot Valley, was given in marriage by her father. She was attired in a floor length gown of silk organza over satin, which featured a bodice of chantilly lace with scalloped neckline and long sleeves and matching cathedral length train. Her headdress of nylon tulle was held in place by a crown of pearls and sequins. She carried a bouquet of red roses.

Mrs. Ingham Ramsay, sister-in-law of the groom, was matron of honour, wearing a street length gown of aqua, with matching headdress and carrying a nosegay of yellow mums. The bridesmaids were Faye Farrar, sister of the bride and Judy Folland. They wore identical street length gowns of pink with matching headdresses and carried nosegays of yellow mums. Velma Jane Farrar, sister of the bride was flower girl in a dress of pink nylon over taffeta, with pink headband and carried a basket of daisy chrysanthemums. Kathy MacAusland was train bearer in a white taffeta dress with a headdress of red rose buds and matching corsage. Ring bearer, was Kenny MacNeill.

The groom, son of Mrs. Wallace Ramsay and the late Mr. Ramsay, St. Eleanor's, was attended by his brother Ingham Ramsay and ushers were Curving Farrar, brother of the bride and David MacAusland.

Following the ceremony a reception was held for 75 guests at the Lions Club Hall, catered by the St. John's Anglican Guild of St. Eleanor's. Rev. G. Walls proposed the toast to the bride which was responded to by the groom. Diana Thomson cousin of the bride, circulated the guest book.

The bride's mother received in a blue two-piece dress with white accessories and a corsage of pink rose buds. Mrs. Ramsay, mother of the groom, was dressed in an aqua suit with white accessories and a corsage of red roses.

For her honeymoon trip the bride chose a powder blue dress of brocaded bengaline with matching three quarter length coat, and a corsage of red rosebuds.

Smoke-Roasted Turkey A Good Picnic Dinner

BY IDA BAILEY ALLEN
For dinner at noon, start the turkey to smoke-roast 2 1/2 to 3 hrs. in advance for 10 to 12 lb. turkey. There's plenty of time left to prepare the vegetables and other foods ready to cook. Just set the timer to remind you to add them to the smoke-oven at the right time. This insures a completely cooked dinner all at once.

tier crepe with turquoise bows as headpieces, and carried bouquets of turquoise and white carnations.

The flower girl, Cheryl MacPherson, another niece of the bride, wore a long white eyelid gown with a turquoise sash and head-bow. She also carried turquoise and white flowers.

Garnet MacIntyre Jr., cousin of the groom was best man, and the ushers were Eric Ellsworth, Daniel Cooper and Ralph Fraser.

A wedding reception for 100 guests was held at the Basilica Recreation Centre, followed by a dance. The bride's mother received in a gown of pink lace with white accessories and a corsage of white roses. The groom's mother wore blue lace, with white roses.

Judy MacPherson and Maxine Cooper circulated the guest book.

For a honeymoon trip to the Cabot Trail, the bride wore a navy and white three piece suit with navy and white accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Balderston have taken up residence at 17 Upper Hillsboro St., Charlottetown.

TURKEY WITH HONEY-LEMON BASTING SAUCE
Prepare a turkey, 10 to 12 lbs., ready-to-cook weight, as usual and truss. Prepare glazing sauce (for basting) as follows:
HONEY-LEMON GLAZING SAUCE
1/2 c. butter or margarine
1 c. honey
1/2 c. lemon juice
Grated rind 1 lemon
1 tsp. salt
Fresh-ground black pepper
The Sauce: Melt butter; add remaining ingredients and heat 5 min.

The Turkey: Meantime, fold a sheet of heavy-duty aluminum double-thick, and turn up the edges all around about 1 inch. Mire (match together) the corners to make a firm "pan". Put pan on the grill rack over the fire and place the turkey in the pan. Brush with the Honey-Lemon Butter Sauce. Cover turkey loosely with a single sheet of foil, just draping it over the bird. Close the cover of the grill, adjust vents half-open and roast 2 1/2 to 3 hrs. One hr. before roasting is finished, remove the foil cover, baste the turkey again with the sauce and continue cooking, basting twice for a fine glaze.
