EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted

1963 OPPORTUNITIES

At intervals during 1963 The Guardian and The Evening Patriot plan to employ several young men and women as "reporters-in-training". Those are not stop-gap or flash-in-the-pan openings. They are permanent positions only for those who are keenly interested in getting the training and experience which can equip them for successful, satisfying careers in newspapering.

Applicants are the quality most desired in applicants. It can be a real challenge in a young man or woman who has a strong desire and sufficient determination to succeed in the field of news gathering and news presentation.

There is at least one immediate opening with an excellent opportunity to become available soon.

At the outset, all applications must be in writing, with personal interviews as follows. They should be addressed to:

Executive Editor,
The Guardian - Patriot
Charlottetown.
