British Businessman Free In Spy Swap With Russia

LONDON (Reuters)—A British businessman was reunited with his joyful wife and son here Wednesday shortly after being freed in Berlin in what was believed to be the first Anglo-Russian "spy swap."

Greville Wynne, 45, in Soviet custody 17 months and serving eight years detention for his alleged work on behalf of British and American intelligence, was traded at dawn on the East-West Berlin border for "Canadian businessman" Gordon Arnold Lonsdale, 37.

A few hours later Wynne arrived here by air and went home.

Lonsdale, whose real name was Conor Molody, was a high-ranking officer in the Soviet intelligence Service.

Molody arrived from Russia to Canada in 1954 and during the year or so he spent there he took over the identity of the real Gordon Lonsdale, who had vanished from Canada when a boy with his Finnish mother.

In 1955, the new Lonsdale sailed to England via New York to set up the spy ring, and for more than five years was successful in passing to the Russians vital information on Britain's underwater defences.

He was the most damaging of the group of spies brought to trial in March, 1961, and was sentenced to 25 years—a record at that time.

Lonsdale was flown in secret Tuesday night from Britain to the British Gatow Military Airport in West Berlin in the same RAF plane that took Waynne back to London after the surprise exchange, British sources reported.

Lonsdale spent the night in the field's small guardroom and was awakened shortly before dawn for the short drive to the nearby East-West Berlin Heerstrasse crossing point in the British sector.

The sources said Lonsdale looked "very fit and quite cheerful" during the swap in a light drizzle amid tight security.

Wynne, who ran a mobile exhibitions firm and often went behind the Iron Curtain, was arrested in Budapest, in November, 1962. He was extradited to Moscow where a court last May convicted him.

Wynne allegedly acted as a contact man between British and U.S. intelligence and top Soviet scientific worker Oleg Penkovsky, executed by a firing squad after their joint trial.

Wynne—pale, drawn, his head shaved—faced reporters almost as soon as he flew into nearby Northolt Airport from Gatow.

ALONE WITH WIFE

Seventy reporters and photographers besieged him outside his Chelsea house here until its yellow door swung shut and, at last, he was alone with his wife Sheila, 42, and his son Andrew, 12.

Mrs. Wynne last saw her husband in March in Russia. Andrew had not seen his father since his arrest.

Answering rapid fire questions from reporters, Wynne said it was "absolutely marvellous to be back" but declared himself "very tired."

The foreign office said the British government here recently learned Wynne's physical condition had "seriously deteriorated," adding that on April 7 Russia said it was willing to "pardon" Wynnne if Lonsdale also was released.

The foreign office added the Russians said that without prejudicing their earlier views about Wynne's trial and Lonsdale's guilt, they felt that in exceptional cases humanitarian motives should predominate.

Wynne told reporters he had lost considerable weight and found Soviet prison food "very difficult."

Reporters and his Chelsea neighbors cheered as Wynne hugged his wife. A family friend said Wynne, sleepless for two days, was going straight to bed.

Nickle Find Is Reported In Manitoba

TORONTO (CP) — International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd., has uncovered a new nickel ore body near Thompson, Man., and will be bringing a new mine into production by 1968, Henry S. Wigate, chairman, said Wednesday.

He also told the company's annual meeting first - quarter earnings this year are "much the highest" in the company's history—about $34,000,000 compared with $25,000,000 in the first quarter of 1963.

Mr. Wingate said the new ore body "is separate and distinct" from the Thompson Mine. It will be called the Birchtree Mine.

He gave no details immediately as to the size and quality of the ore body.

The find would not require any increase in the milling, refining and smelting facilities at Thompson.

"While the Birchtree Mine is not expected to be comparable in size to our Thompson Mine, the grade of the ore is good and the indicated quantity is sufficient to warrant immediate mining," Mr. Wingate said.

"We will start the sinking of a production shaft at Birchtree by midsummer of this year. The mine should be ready for production by 1968."

Earlier Mr. Wingate told a press conference INCO is doubling its exploration work near the site of a major mineral strike in the Porcupine district of Northern Ontario.

He said, however, that so far the search has produced "nothing that is hot."

Bomb Explodes In Dwelling Of Police Sergeant

MONTREAL (CP) — A small bomb — apparently planted by revengeful youths — exploded at the home of a Montreal police sergeant Tuesday night.

It was the second bomb incident of the day in the city. A few hours earlier, a device found under a downtown statue was safely removed and exploded in a field.

Police said there was no connection between the two incidents.

No one was injured when the homemade bomb exploded against the front door of the de Castelneau Street East home of Sgt. Gerard Prevost in northeast Montreal. The blast shattered the door's window.

Sgt. Prevost, a 17-year veteran of the police force, said he had ordered some young thugs to move on after he heard them swearing in the street last week.

He said one of them had answered: "I'll remember that."

Sgt. Prevost said he and his wife had been sitting in the living room of their brick home when the blast occurred.

"I wasn't too upset after I'd discovered nobody was injured," he said. "I expect this kind of thing in the line of duty."

In the other incident, police were called after a mysterious package was discovered by a student under a statue of Queen Victoria at the Royal Victoria College.

The device — composed of wire and nine dynamite sticks —was taken to an east-end field where Det.-Sgt. Leo Plouffel police bomb expert, dismantled it and exploded the dynamite.

Monuments, statues, and federal institutions have been the targets of Quebec terrorists.

Police smashed the terrorist organization Front de Liberation Quebecois last year. Its members were convicted and sentenced following a 10 - week nightmare of bombings in Montreal that claimed the life of one man and maimed another.

Another terrorist group, l'Armee de Liberation de Quebec, has claimed responsibility for the theft of large quantities of arms from armories in Montreal and Shawinigan, Que.

Liquor Used On Converts, Synod Told

SARNIA (CP) — Rev. J. P. Shiffler, missions convener for the Hamilton and London Synod of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, said Tuesday liquor is used by some Roman Catholic missionaries to win converts in Formosa.

Some priests go into a village and throw a party for the inhabitants to win them over," Mr. Shiffler told the synod's annual conference here. Afterwards all the men "would be roaring drunk."

"There is always a constant supply of beer and liquor to hold their new and weak converts," said Mr. Shiffler of West Flamboro, near Hamilton.

Opening lead—king of spades.

There is more to the play of most hands than meets the eye. Thrusts and counter-thrusts are available to both sides in many hands, and the result is frequently determined by the amount of thought devoted by each side to planning the play.

For example, take this hand where South is in four hearts. West leads three rounds of spades and declarer ruffs the third one.

South realizes that if the trumps are divided 3-2, he can make the contract by playing three rounds of hearts and then leading a diamond. This will bring him to ten sure tricks.

But he also realizes that the trumps may be divided 4-1, in which case, if he draws all the trumps, he may be (and in this case, would be) defeated.

So let's say that he leads a low diamond towards dummy at trick four to forestall this danger. If West is on his toes and goes up with the ace and returns a spade, South is defeated— whether he trumps in his own hand or in dummy. West's holding of four trumps proves insurmountable. (If West makes the error of ducking the diamond, declarer makes ten tricks by drawing trumps and cashing his clubs.)

However, South can make the contract by proper play despite the 4-1 trump break. After ruffing the spade at trick three he cashes the Q-J of hearts. When East shows out on the second trump lead, declarer discontinues playing trumps. He leads a diamond to the queen instead, keeping the deuce of hearts in dummy as a guard against another spade lead.

West takes the ace of diamonds, but he is out of ammunition. When he returns a spade, which is as good a play as he can make, declarer ruffs it in dummy, discarding a club from his own hand. South then enters his hand with a club, draws trumps with the A-K, and easily makes the rest of the tricks.
