Striking Evidence

Ontario and one from Saskatchewan. This Province also had 10 in the 85-89 test class, 18 in the 80-84 class and 4 in the 75-79 class.

Although there were 34 falling to qualify because their test scores were in the low 55 to 64 group, only one of the animals was from here.

Impressive Figures A summary of results across Canada in Advanced Registry reveals the extent of the success of the careful breeding policy followed here in recent years.

Province Qualified Failed P. E. I. 41 6 N. S. and N. B. 12 3 Que. 13 27 Ont. 41 53 Man. 16 17 Sask. 12 11 Alta. 11 14 Totals 146 131

This solid leadership trend has been noted for a long period now as evidenced by the fact that last month this Province continued to hold its advantage. With 17 entries in the Advanced Registry there were 16 qualified and the one animal which missed was in the 70-74 class to just lose out. Ontario had 30 hogs entered, but 18 failed. In all Canada there were 53 qualified and 41 failed.

In the slaughter test score once again Island hogs were predominant as only five animals in Canada had a test score of 90 or over and four of them were from the Island. Four more were in the 85-89 class; seven in the 80-84 class, and one in the 75-79 class.

Several Plans Open To Government In Rail Strike Crisis

OTTAWA, Jan. 28 (CP) - Several possible alternatives face the government as it wrestles with the problem of staffing off a rail strike set for Monday morning.

The cabinet discussion of one today in a successful appeal by Labor Minister Gregg to the disputants to get together in a fourth round of negotiations.

While there has been no indication of what further action the Ministers might take in the event of one more collapse of union-company talks at Montreal, the courses open to them include:

1. Appealing to the union to put off the strike date while new trials at settlement are made.

2. Sending a mediator to deal with the disputants at Montreal.

3. Asking spokesmen for the railways and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen to come to Ottawa for conferences with Labor Department conciliation specialists and possibly with the cabinet itself.

4. Indicating to the government-owned Canadian National Railways compromise settlement terms that might be acceptable to the union. The other railways would almost inevitably have to follow any such lead.

5. Preparing no-strike law. All of these methods were used at one time or another in the strike-threatened 1948 dispute and in the 1950 fight that resulted eventually in a nine-day strike of non-operating employees.

In the 1948 dispute, the settlement terms of a 16-cents-an-hour wage increase were dictated to the C.N.R. by the government, and the other lines had to follow suit.

In 1950, strike-ending legislation passed by Parliament in emergency session ended the tie-up. It provided for compulsory arbitration of differences.

That dispute ran through the whole gamut of the other alternatives, except for government direction to the C.N.R.

Stronger Weapon This time, if all forms of voluntary settlement fail, the government has a stronger weapon in its hands for fast action than it had in 1950. That is the Emergency Powers Act of March, 1951.

Under this bill, cabinet may by order-in-council do whatever it considers advisable for the "security, defence, peace, order and welfare" of Canada on various matters including:

"Transportation by land, air or water and the control of the transport of persons and things."

The act, which declares a state of international emergency exists, evidently empowers the government to take any measures it sees fit to keep the trains running.

Parliament now in session, should the government want to put legislation through the Houses rather than use the order-in-council method. However, the Senate is not due to reconvene from the Christmas recess until Tuesday night.

Parking Space Problem Stressed At S'side Council

The necessity of finding more and adequate parking space in the vicinity of Water Street, Summerside, was emphasized by the Town Improvement Committee when it presented its report at the recent annual meeting of the Town Council.

The report stated that three sites were under consideration but cost of acquiring them had not yet been gone into.

It was also said that during the past year the range of the fire alarm system was examined and a suggestion made that the large siren in the park and the smaller one in other sections be synchronized and the fire bell be used to indicate the zone in which a fire is located.

Police Chief Peter R. White noted in his report that there was an increase of 146 cases over the previous year before Stipendiary Magistrate Ernest H. Strong. The total was 459 in 1952.

Freight Shipments The Transportation Committee noted that the C. N. R. had given good service in the past year and particularly commended for keeping the freight office open on Saturday afternoons. The report said that approximately 200,000 cartons of potatoes had been shipped from Summerside by rail this season and over 400,000 bags of potatoes at 100 pounds were shipped by water. Congestion at the old wharf had occurred because of this shipping at the same time as ship cargoes were loading and fertilizing unloading. It noted that the Holman Wharf is completed and the Railway Wharf is now under construction.

Considerable work could be done to encourage new industry to come into the Town, it was stated by the Industrial Development Committee, but a great deal of statistical information would have to be compiled. It was felt that this would take more time than could be given to it by a part-time committee. However, the report stated it was felt no large scale development will result without considerable preparation work being done by a local body.

Suggested changes in the new Post Office were remarked on by the Mail Committee. They included extra sidewalks to Central Street from the night lobby entrance and extra doors to prevent mail blowing out of boxes into the interior of the Post Office.
