

THE DAILY EXAMINER

OCTOBER 30, 1895.

THE PATRONS AND THE GRITS.

We have often met the statement in Conservative papers that the Patron movement in Ontario is merely a side-show for the benefit of the Grit party.

The attack on the Island dairy industry by the Patron organ bears all the earmarks of a genuine Grit production which it really is.

The letter of Mr. Daly is a most effective reply to the Patron organ's misrepresentation of the Government's attitude towards the butter and cheese industry in Prince Edward Island.

Henry M. Stanley believes that England will not find it necessary to fight Russia. The English people are a quiet, peace-loving people.

The "Maritime Grocer" remarks that "if we want to secure the markets that are rightfully ours we must first put our wares into a condition that will suit the trade, and then we must send a representative to announce their value."

WAR WITH ASHANTEE.

It is generally believed in London that Great Britain is again on the eve of war with Ashantee. Not long ago the Government sent to the King of Ashantee an ultimatum, the terms of which have been refused.

Mr. L. H. Davis has been telling a Moncton scribe that he "feels confident that an overwhelming victory will crown the Liberal party in the coming general elections."

THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

The Monroe Doctrine, which has lately been assiduously promulgated by the press of the United States, has been well met by Sir George Baden Powell, who points out that Great Britain has an established American power in the West Indies and over all the great Canadian Dominion.

COLD STORAGE.

In the course of an article upon this interesting subject, the Co-operative Farmer and Maritime Dairyman says: "Cold storage will not help us to produce goods cheaply, nor will it insure them of good quality, but after the farmer, the dairyman or the fruit grower has done his part then this preservative is at hand to keep those dairy products, those meats or those fruits in prime condition until they can be placed on the market."

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Henry M. Stanley believes that England will not find it necessary to fight Russia. The English people are a quiet, peace-loving people.

The great African explorer, H. M. Stanley, has just returned from a visit to Northwestern Canada. He says: "I visited the gold mines at Kootenay, between the Canadian Pacific line and the United States boundary. Part of these mines are in the United States. The gold production is wonderful. I think the mines will be second only to those of South Africa."

The rumor that the Government had decided to notify James Huddart that his contract for a fast Atlantic steamship service is at an end is pronounced a "hoax" by Sir Mackenzie Bowell.

The "Maritime Grocer" remarks that "if we want to secure the markets that are rightfully ours we must first put our wares into a condition that will suit the trade, and then we must send a representative to announce their value."

THE CORBETT-FITZSIMMONS FIGHT.

On Oct. 25—Private telegrams were received in this city this evening from both Brady and Julian stating that the fight will positively come off on Thursday. Brady says it will be in private, for a side bet of $5,000 or $10,000.

MEET BE A DEACONY HORSE.—The man who wants a drink is always fertile in excuses as to how he will get it. A New Yorker who was arrested for having sold whiskey on a recent Sunday pleaded that the man who bought it said it was for a sick horse.

Look out for colds at this season. Keep yourself well and strong by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great tonic and blood purifier.

Just Received.—November magazines and fashion papers, 500 new books at half publishers' price. Something new every day arriving at Carter's Bookstore.

Good reading for the long evenings.—Get a set of Parkman's works and do not waste your time reading trash.—Hazard & Moore.

Have you seen our beautiful range of fall overcoats? It will be your advantage to see them.—S. A. McDonald.

We have a Bannockburn tweed, doubled and twisted, yarn, which we will make up in the very latest style for $16. Braid anything on top of this earth.—McKay Woolen Co., well tailors.

GLEANNINGS.

Some time ago I gave a Liberal's view of the result of the English election. I now submit a statement from a Unionist's point of view.

From the result of the general election in England, the following conclusions may be drawn, with some confidence, from the following conclusions:

First. The people of the United Kingdom, or, to use ordinary language, the English people, have pronounced their desire against the policy of home rule for Ireland. The validity of the conclusion, I am aware, disputed by Home-Rulers. It rests, however, not on any subtleties of political calculation, but on broad, indisputable facts, of which every man, whatever his political leaning, can and ought to take notice.

Secondly. The home rulers have suffered not only a repulse, but a permanent defeat. It has become impossible that during any time for which politicians take forethought, an act should be carried establishing an Irish Parliament.

Thirdly. The assent of the Unionist party to the home rule bill, which was carried by a majority of 100 to 150, was not a concession, but a tactical error.

Fourthly. The assent of the Unionist party to the home rule bill, which was carried by a majority of 100 to 150, was not a concession, but a tactical error.

Fifthly. The assent of the Unionist party to the home rule bill, which was carried by a majority of 100 to 150, was not a concession, but a tactical error.

Sixthly. The assent of the Unionist party to the home rule bill, which was carried by a majority of 100 to 150, was not a concession, but a tactical error.

Seventhly. The assent of the Unionist party to the home rule bill, which was carried by a majority of 100 to 150, was not a concession, but a tactical error.

Eighthly. The assent of the Unionist party to the home rule bill, which was carried by a majority of 100 to 150, was not a concession, but a tactical error.

Ninthly. The assent of the Unionist party to the home rule bill, which was carried by a majority of 100 to 150, was not a concession, but a tactical error.

Tenthly. The assent of the Unionist party to the home rule bill, which was carried by a majority of 100 to 150, was not a concession, but a tactical error.

Eleventhly. The assent of the Unionist party to the home rule bill, which was carried by a majority of 100 to 150, was not a concession, but a tactical error.

Twelfthly. The assent of the Unionist party to the home rule bill, which was carried by a majority of 100 to 150, was not a concession, but a tactical error.

Thirteenthly. The assent of the Unionist party to the home rule bill, which was carried by a majority of 100 to 150, was not a concession, but a tactical error.

Fourteenthly. The assent of the Unionist party to the home rule bill, which was carried by a majority of 100 to 150, was not a concession, but a tactical error.

Fifteenthly. The assent of the Unionist party to the home rule bill, which was carried by a majority of 100 to 150, was not a concession, but a tactical error.

Sixteenthly. The assent of the Unionist party to the home rule bill, which was carried by a majority of 100 to 150, was not a concession, but a tactical error.

Seventeenthly. The assent of the Unionist party to the home rule bill, which was carried by a majority of 100 to 150, was not a concession, but a tactical error.

Eighteenthly. The assent of the Unionist party to the home rule bill, which was carried by a majority of 100 to 150, was not a concession, but a tactical error.

Nineteenthly. The assent of the Unionist party to the home rule bill, which was carried by a majority of 100 to 150, was not a concession, but a tactical error.
