

BEATLE-TYPE HAIR DEFENDED

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — A "mod-look" clothier, testifying in a federal court case involving three teen-agers barred from a high school because of their Beatle-length hair, says "a full head of hair balances the look."

The "long-hair style is common among the youth... it's part of a new revolution in men's clothes," Jim Burkleo, the owner and manager of a Dallas shop, testified here.

The case involves three teen-agers who claim Principal W. S. Lanham arbitrarily refused to allow them to register for classes unless they "trimmed up a bit." Stephen Webb, 18, and Paul and Phillip Farrell, both 17, are members of a rock 'n' roll group called Sounds Unlimited. They contend a contract requires them to keep their hair long.

A temporary restraining order permits the boys to return to classes pending the outcome of their suit against the school administration.

The group's lawyers have put 16 witnesses on the stand, 10 of them teen-agers whose hair is as long or longer than the rock 'n' rollers. All were allowed to register in their schools without incident.

Lanham said his decision not to admit the trio was taken in the interest of or-

Pope Gives Advice To Theologians

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope Paul warned the Roman Catholic church's theologians to leave final pronouncements on questions of faith to the bishops and the Pope.

Individual conclusions drawn outside the framework of the church's established hierarchy would be "the way to heresy," he said.

Pope Paul addressed 1,200 of the church's leading theologians at an audience marking the end of a week-long congress on new ways to approach the interpretation of church doctrine.

On the opening day the pontiff stressed the need for loyalty to the papacy and bishops. His closing words were even more direct, he said:

"To reach far away from it (the hierarchy), along arbitrary personal ways, would easily put you in risk of remaining alone... or even deviating from the straight road, choosing your judgment instead of the thought of the church as a criterion for truth. It would be an arbitrary choice — heresy — the way to heresy."

CITES SCHOLARS' TASK
Pope Paul said the task of religious scholars is to study the revelation and inform the church hierarchy of the conclusions. It is up to the Pope and the bishops, he said, to state the truths of faith.

He cautioned the theologians against "indulging in the wish of an easy popularity at the expense of the certainty of the doctrine taught by the hierarchy."

The theologians met here to consider how to interpret new doctrines laid down by the Ecumenical Council of 1962-65.

Their findings, as summarized at a press conference, were that the Bible and man must be given greater importance in religious study and worship. One point was that theology must develop the concept of religious liberty, its exact meaning and importance.

Watershed Management Discussed

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Good watershed management doesn't just mean covering the area with trees, two water management experts said here during the Canadian Institute of Forestry annual meeting.

Prof. W. W. Jeffrey of the University of British Columbia said proper management could mean cutting down all trees and replacing them with grass — "pure rank heresy" to foresters.

And Martin D. Hoover, chief hydrologist for the U.S. forest service, said dense stands of timber are using up water and in some places cover is so heavy springs have dried up.

Prof. Jeffrey said in an interview foresters tend to look at empty land and think "I could plant a nice stand of spruce trees here." But this attitude may hurt somebody else.

Mr. Hoover said there has been lack of communication between water-users and forest management. Too many foresters were unfamiliar with water needs and closer ties were needed.
