ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

As in recent days there it was again this morning! We awakened to rain on the window and later found mist on the hillsides, and gray cloud touching their summits. And looking back along its trail, it was to remember that our pilgrimage this week had been for the greater part attended by such falling weather.

And in mind, now that the bright colors no longer flame and glow along the farmlands, and sober shades are about, we have replaced the word "Autumn" with that which signifies last drifting leaves and bare branches and cold, quiet fields. This is the season of Fall.

But still we shall catch nice glimpses of that former sunny mellowness, at times as we drift or are carried swiftly into the "steely hands" of our windy days. Meanwhile hope tries in various ways to scale the gray slippery heights of the like of these we have by us.

"For rainy days" someone has written "it is good to have a litany of shining names to say over to yourself. Mine runs like this: A cockcrow, a mist of dandelions, a thrush in the deep woods, and water seen through the trees. These are the words that always start a ripple in my mind, sending out circles of crystal until the world seems shining."

So showers—dampness, cloud—that mostly has been our week; cows coming early to the pasture, and the horses, anxious to be let into the night-shelter and warmth of the stables; troubled milnord too, and winds gusty and complaining about the chimney and yards—Fall writing its name all about.

But sometimes woven in brightly here and there in the quiet fabric of the week, there were touches of blue sky and sunlight. Then the farmers went briskly off to the work to shingle a roof, or to the harvesting of the root crop or the plowing to make some progress there, hurried by yet another season which waits now we fancy just back of our line of hills. On "borrowed time" they work now—that being lent them by November.

November—with now a Fall night, cool, dim, with a bit of damp on the panes, and a wisp of white mist about the eaves. But week's work done, this household is gathered now out of it, to the shelter and lamplight and warmth within. How cozy it is—and good! And we

"Prise God for warmth—for little rooms that hold
A warm bright fire, shelter from the cold,
For love that bids us welcome,
holds us dear,
For Peace that hovers like a pigeon near,
Prise God for warmth—oh heart,
for warmth and light
For walls that shut us from the lonely night,
For He who wandered homeless
knows the way
Footsteps turn homeward at the close of day."
Until Monday—Diary—Goodnight

Chef's Appetizing Salmon Makes Hit With Guests

By OLI DAUM
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—The test may still be the taste but dinner guests today expect a more delicious looking dish than they did in grandmother's day.

The head chef of the largest hotel in the Commonwealth says any hostess can make a hit with her guests with a little time and patience.

Donat Perreault, a French-Canadian born in Sherbrooke, has served patrons of the Royal York hotel here for 23 years.

His dinners are more elaborate than the average housewife would prepare but, he says, she can certainly make her spread every bit as mouth-watering.

One of Donat's most appetizing dishes is a mounted salmon decorated and glazed. For this dish he usually uses a salmon almost three feet long. It's sure to be the highlight of any dinner party.

Here's how to prepare it: Remove eyes of unsealed salmon and wash thoroughly; place salmon in oblong pot; slice in onions, celery, carrots, a lemon and add 2 tablespoons salt; place in cold water to cover and boil for 20 minutes over a slow fire; remove pot from fire and let fish cool in the water.

When fish has cooled, place on platter.

Prepare salmon paste: add to 2 tins salmon enough butter to make firm paste; squeeze paste through cake decorator from head to tail on back of salmon and on sides of fish to be decorated; allow a few minutes to set.

Insert boiled egg-white centred with half a glazed cherry into eye socket; into salmon paste place washed shrimp, olives or other small foods in a regular, attractive pattern.

Prepare glaze: into chicken stock chop meat, boiled egg-whites, onions, celery and carrots.

If a very pastel tint of paint is desired, add a small amount of color to white or light gray. To darken a color, add more color or black. Start with the color nearest the shade you desire. To gray or dull a color, mix a color with the one exactly the opposite on the color wheel. For example, add green to red for a muted tone. Neutralizing with a complementary color instead of black produces rich, subtle colors.

MORNING SMILE

The photographer from the town's leading newspaper was posing farmer Brown and his son who was home from college on a visit.

"Let the boy stand with his hand on your shoulder," suggested the photographer.

"If you want to look natural," said the long-suffering parent, "he could put his hand in my pocket."

BOOK REVIEW

"Grandma's Cooking"

"Grandma's Cooking" by Allan Keller, published by Prentice-Hall and retailing at $3.75 is one of the most delightful books to come off the press in recent years. Good old-fashioned recipes coupled with the same type of philosophy make this interesting reading for the modern homemaker as well as the whole family.

From the first statement, "My grandmother was the best cook in the whole wide world," one knows that it is going to be full of lively episodes in the early New England life of a lucky little boy and his famous-cooking grandmother.

Over 200 of Grandma's traditionally famous New England recipes are featured in this book for you to prepare and enjoy. In the typical Yankee manner her kitchen skills do far more than satisfy appetites. "Neighbourhood life revolved around her wood-paneled kitchen."

Delightfully illustrated with sketch decorations by Rus Anderson, it is a book full of zest and joy of Yankee life a half a century ago. It is spiced with a e d o t e about strawberry festivals, parades, sleigh rides, church suppers and rides in a Stanley steamer.

A book full of Eastern seaboard customs and dishes it should be popular with our Island folk. For most, it will bring back memories of their Grandma's kitchens sampling dishes such as fish chowder, lobster stew, potato cakes, clam fritters and molasses and apple muffins.
