Launching the Ship

A HOLIDAY IN NOVA SCOTIA.

(Harper's Weekly)

At last, though time is never laggard in a shipyard, launching day is at hand. Not that the ship is completed; "most generally a fortnight's work oughter be done first"; but the owner is tired of waiting for her, and the builder is willing to see her go. And so the most of the carpenters and laborers are set to work getting the ways in place and building a cradle under her, laying a railway of heavy timbers, down which the ship is to slide, and building a framework to hold her as she goes. Where the water shoals gradually the ways may be laid upon the ground for the entire distance, but in most places about the Bay of Fundy the shores are steep, and the water end of this railway must be a substantial trestle, well braced and spiked together, and held down at high tide by barrels of gravel from the beach—something that always looks very funny to the novice.

Meantime the builder has gone or sent away to the nearest printing office to have some posters printed announcing the coming event, for launching day is the chiefest of Nova Scotia's holidays. Colored paper—green, red or yellow—and bold type are in high favor for such occasions. Here is the wording of such a bill:

MARRIAGE
ANOTHER BIG SHIP TO OLD OCEAN
AT
SPENCER'S ISLAND
ON
SATURDAY, AUGUST 20, AT ABOUT 1 30 O'CLOCK
Cumberland County's largest ship will be LAUNCHED,
FULL RIGGED AND EQUIPPED FOR SEA.

Such an invitation will draw hundreds of spectators. At the launching of the bark Argenta, at Eatonville in August, when I was present, I saw people who had driven more than thirty miles in order to see the launching. They all came in holiday attire, old and young, parents and children, lovers and sweethearts—all were gay, and all very much interested in any peculiarities or unique features about the ship, and all watching for signs that will indicate what her luck is to be.

With hundreds of critical and no end of mischievous eyes upon them, the men do the 1st strokes of work about the ways and the ship with a will and a care that, exercised all along, would have made a better ship in half the time. The spectators swarm everywhere. They stand and sit on the trestles, on the ways, they gather in the shade of toolhouse and shed; they clamber up the staging, and get in the way of the men at work; a few young people in couples commonly stray off to out-of-the-way places in the yard in a manner that indicates a greater interest in something other than shipbuilding. The foreman frets and fumes about on all sides; the builder, silent but anxious, watches the doings with his hands in his pockets; the owner, bland and smiling, receives the ladies on the quarter-deck, and compliments them on their charms, while they praise the new ship and admire the bunting with which she is always decorated.

Finally the time comes when the tiny waves of the flood-tide break over the tops of the barrel of gravel that hold down the outer ways. The water will rise no higher, and a gang of sturdy young fellows with mauls and wedges crawl under the stern end of the ship's cradle, and begin to split out the blocks on which the weight of the ship rests. There has been no end of chopping and pounding and clatter all along, but the click of maul and wedge is different, and the sound hushes the busy tongues, even stills the wail of the tired baby, for it is a signal that announces the quick departure of the new ship, never to return. Silently, but nervously shifting about in their places, the spectators gaze at the motionless hulk, while the "click, click" from under the cradle grows muffled as the men go further in, and louder again as they near the end, until at last the tops of the tall spars are seen to tremble faintly, and then, with slow but quickening speed, she glides away. Sweeping over the head of the beach, she cuts a shining curl of foam from the crest of the wave that rises to meet her, tips lightly from the end of the cradle, and floats away, bowing in gentle courtesy to the throngs upon the shore.

Boxing For Boys

(From Harper's Young People.)

There is absolutely nothing in the way of recreation so beneficial in every respect to a boy as boxing. I am positive—and I know whereof I write, for as boy and man I have tried them all, fencing, wrestling, rowing, swimming, riding—that no one of them has the many advantages of boxing. As an all round developer it is unequalled; not one of the boy's muscled remain inactive; back, stomach, legs, arms, all are called upon for vigorous service. But what I consider its best feature is its recommendation for boys is the very thorough drilling which the disposition of the boy must undergo. If a lad is quick to lose his temper, boxing will cure him; it will teach him that no one one who lets his temper get the better of him will become an expert sparrer; it will speedily convince him of the absolute necessity of keeping cool and in entire possession of his wits in order to sustain his efforts and avoid defeat. The boxer who cannot control his temper is practically at the mercy of a cool, skillful opponent. One cannot spar successfully and become flustered. A boxer must ever be on the alert, his wits constantly alive, looking for an opportunity of assault; he must be able to act instantly and with cool deliberation, as distinguished from wild, undirected action. He need do no running to develop the muscles of his legs or his lungs; these are all continuously in action.

Literary Notes.

The appearance of Appleton's Canadian Guide Book will commend itself to tourists and sportsmen, and even to general readers, since the work has a literary interest throughout. This book, written by the Canadian author and sportsman, Charles G. D. Roberts, covers Eastern Canada from Niagara Falls to Cape Breton, including the Lake St. John country, and also including a thorough account of the little known Island of Newfoundland. The book has been elaborately illustrated throughout. In addition to information regarding points of interest for the tourist, routes, hotel fares, etc., it presents a continuous story of travel, with entertaining historical notes, graphic descriptions of scenery and people, sketches of canoeing trips, and accounts of the opportunities for fishing; and the appendix, which gives special, practical information for the sportsman, includes the fish and game laws of the different provinces, and lists of trout and salmon rivers and their lessees.

An illustrated article on "Yale University," by John Seymour Wood, will be published in Harper's Young People for June 16th. This is the second of a series of papers on prominent American colleges prepared especially for that periodical. These papers have been written by recent graduates, and contain much information not given in the catalogues, but yet of great interest to all young people who are looking forward to a college career.

Maarten Maarten's new story, "An Old Maid's Love": "A Dutch Tale told in English," has just been added to Harper's Franklin Square Library.

"Literary Industries," an important volume of reminiscences, by Hubert Howe Bancroft, is announced as nearly ready for publication by Harper & Brothers.

Crops in the States.

(Breder's Gazette, Chicago.)

The drouth is broken. Before the last issue of the Gazette, referring to the discouraging dearth of rain, was off the press the flood gates were opened. From all accounts it would now appear that there is no occasion at present for further complaints as to lack of moisture. In some localities the atmospheric disturbances have been extremely severe. Winds, hail, lightning, and cloud-bursts have done much damage locally, but in general it may be said that the outlook is much more favorable as a result of the recent storms. Corn wants more sunshine to force it forward, but it is now well started. The heavy rainfall and subsequent abnormally low range of temperature has of course been very destructive to insect pests. Cut-worms have been at work in some portions of the corn-belt, and considerable areas have had to be re-planted on this account.

The Prince of Wales—An American View.

From Harper's Weekly.

To a manly nature no conspicuous part in the world can be more galling than that allotted both now and later to the Prince of Wales. His function is not to be that which it seems to be. He will be a King tolerated because he does not possess royal power. As he does not chance to have serious tastes like his father, Prince Albert, his only earnest pursuit must be doing nothing, and the conditions of his position necessarily tempt him to be good for nothing. If he prove to be, as the Prince of Wales is understood to be, a good-natured saunterer living for enjoyment, the devout Englishman may thank his stars. If scandals of various kinds occasionally cloud his career, the good Englishman may rejoice if they do not involve flagrant personal disgrace. No man is subjected to a more searching ordeal of character than the Prince of Wales. It is no merit for poor and obscure men to be irreproachable, when it is highly creditable for a prince. The soul of St. Francis was not troubled by the assaults of the devil when he came as a demon; it was imperilled only when he appeared as a houri. It is the utmost good fortune rather than ill fortune which endangers character. It is Capua which undermines; the sun, not the wind.

Horse Notes.

Horses are human in at least one respect; they do not relish a fixed ration, but enjoy a variety as well as a man. With a slight change in the make up of the ration, the horses will be kept in good appetite and ready for active service. While good hay and oats will always form the staple articles in feeding, as flour does with mankind, the combinations possible will insure variety and good health. Especially is the growing of vegetable to be insisted upon as valuable in promoting good health of all parts. The secret of good service is to keep the horses in healthy, thriving condition.

News Notes.

A Kansas boy, who earned a bible by memorizing verses, traded the book for a shotgun, and then accidentally shot his aunt in the leg.

A London dealer recently received in one consignment 32,000 dead humming birds, 80,000 aquatic birds and 800,000 pairs of birds' wings, so it is reported.

Seventeen out of twenty farms sold by the sheriff in Cowley County, Kansas, last week, had been mortgaged for more than they were worth and abandoned.

The gentlemen of the 11th at Covington, Ky., are moving against a justice of the peace who lately has secured a practical monopoly of the marrying business because of his formula: "Join hands. Do you both consent? All right, you are married." For the license and $2 under the floor. This ceremony is performed from a bedroom window upstairs, while the happy couple stand before the door outside the house. The justice's object is much to his credit for the ceremony as to his peripatetic receipts for the ceremonies.
