

Don't Neglect Your Watch

If you allow your watch to run too long without cleaning, or with damaged parts it may be worn so badly as to destroy its usefulness as a timepiece; better have it examined by your Watch Doctor and if in need of repairs he will advise you accordingly and perhaps save your watch.

WE GUARANTEE ALL OUR WORK; if you have not given us a trial it will pay you to do so and we will be pleased to see you at GREAT GEORGE STREET.

HEART DISEASE

A Toronto Physician Says it Never Exists Without the Presence of Some Kidney Disease.

Toronto, June 11.—The number of sudden deaths due to heart disease is appalling. The medical profession is devoting more attention to the heart and its ailments at the present time than ever before, and many physicians are making a specialty of diseases of this organ. A Toronto doctor, who devotes much attention to this branch of his practice, says to your reporter to-day, "I have yet to learn of a single case where heart disease caused death, in which a post mortem examination did not show the existence of Bright's Disease, Diabetes, or some other kidney disease." Dadd's Kidney Pills will cure all disease of the kidneys and thus ward off the danger of heart disease.

FOR YOUNG MEN.

what will deal the severest blow to your moral integrity of character.

You are, of course, well aware that the dictates of natural wisdom, as well as of Christian discipline, are largely neglected by mankind; but you are strong in the conviction that some at least—some marked, out by their office and calling—can always be relied upon as becoming examples of righteousness. This assurance is security for the endurance of your good dispositions, and a refuge from misgivings as to the practical value of your early moral training. What then must be your chagrin and dismay when, as you advance through life, those towers of refuge and pillars of strength, not unfrequently dwindle away as you draw nearer to them, and are found to be only weak and wavering if not broken reeds. Briefly, therefore, the question of your first danger resolves itself into this: a time shall come when, owing to experiences at first disheartening, a change shall be wrought in your way of thinking. Shall you act the part of the patient and strong, and whilst modifying your views, retain as firmly as ever your grasp of their essential nature; or will you, like the impatient and weak, shirk labour and responsibilities by abandoning them altogether?

Tolerance of the opinions of others is productive of evil chiefly in a negative sense. It prevents us from discerning the strata of good that everywhere underlies human nature; it contracts the limits of our sympathy which should be as far-reaching as the uttermost human ills; it disposes to pessimistic views of life, and closes out from us the light of other minds, often so valuable for the development of truth within our own.

Hence from the outset you should be persuaded that the truths which define your duties as reasonable and Christian men, and elevate you to the highest possible standard of life, are neither discredited nor overthrown because you have had an inadequate concept of the modifications they bear when applied in actual life. "When I was a child," (wrote St. Paul, I Cor. XIII.) "I spoke as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child. But when I became a man, I put away the things of a child." St. Paul's mind was developing, and viewing the same truths in clearer light and under truer images than those of his childhood. Your minds are developing too. But it is no disparagement to say they have not yet developed to the full. You are in respect to many things theorists still, and the theorist, whilst his calculations may be correct relatively to the data on which he works, can never reach all the elements that are going to influence the practical resultant of his principles. Hence when you shall have wider experience of man as he is in this wide world of pleasure and pain, you need not think it strange if your opinions will require readjustment in many details. If, however, the world will not appear to you what you think it should, the unexpected discovery will not prove disagreeable, for, I am persuaded, you will meet as much good in it as you had expected;—I shall make bold to say, even more, although, like the gold that winds in buried veins around the base of the mountain instead of glinting on its naked summit, invisible to gazers from a distance. You will learn that man is human, even at his best; but his virtue will appreciate in your sight, when seen lifting him heavenward amid the numerous counter-forces of animal passions and spirit-deadening pleasures. It will be cherished as something nearer to yourselves than the fictitious and almost repellant sanctity enthroned above the turmoil in which we move and have our feelings moored. But perhaps the greatest compensation for the discount of your cherished opinions will be the gradual discovery that goodness extends wider and deeper into the mass of mankind than many, besides the pessimists, are willing to acknowledge. However, the overthrow of your ideals—though of course only partial—is, I admit, a real danger to your intellectual and moral well-being. Must I maintain the struggle for a higher standard of life whilst so many who, I thought, should inspire me most by their example have lapsed into the way of the great multitude? Is it not some specious fallacy that holds me to the precepts or my early training, since numerous men of recognized ability live prosperous and contented without them? These are questions which may some day agitate your minds. Here, then, is where you must be strong; here is where you must brand deep into your souls the doctrine that the dominating motive of action should not be the example of others. Certain things are good and vital, how many soever may ignore them; certain things are wicked and deadly, however warmly the multitude may cherish them. Ideals, just because they are ideals, are necessarily rare, and their rarity is only proof of their superior value. For you it should be enough to know what things are the best and attainable. You are not to take your cue for conduct from the many who have failed, but—if example is to impel you—from the few who have stretched out to the goal and secured it. An order has been established in Creation which imposes on intelligent minds a law of conduct. A supernatural sanction has been given to this law, a supernatural light cast upon it to make its existence and limits unmistakable, and supernatural means, answering the end to be obtained, furnished to mankind.

Look about you into the heavens and to the earth, and everywhere you will discover law and the evidence of infinite intelligence dominating all things. Study more carefully, and you will see that each element has functions and limits defined for it by a law that suffers neither failure nor trespass, except at the price of prompt punishment suited to the nature of the offender. Then turn within yourselves and enquire what part have you in this great world. The answer will not be far to seek; you are no exception to the general law of duty and reward. You must live according to what is best in you—according to the dictates of the spirit and the promptings of your nobler instincts, otherwise, like every other creature, animate and inanimate, you shall pay the penalty of

YEARS OF AGONY.

Resulting from Sciatica in an Aggravated Form.

Many Nights the Sufferer Could Not Lie In Bed, and His Leg was Frequently Swollen to Twice its Natural Size.

From the Journal, St. Catharines.

Mr. John T. Benson, stationary engineer at the Ridley College St. Catharines, is known by most of the residents of the city. For years Mr. Benson suffered acute agony from sciatica, and not withstanding numerous forms of treatment, found little or no relief, until he began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills speedily restored his health, as they have done that of thousands of others who have given them a fair trial. To the reporter who interviewed him, Mr. Benson said: "I certainly owe a debt of gratitude to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for they have released me from a form of torture that had afflicted me almost continuously for twenty years. The pain began first in my back, then shifted to my hip, and thence down my leg. It became so severe that it seemed as though the very marrow in my bones was being scalded, and at times I could scarcely repress crying aloud from the agony I endured. I tried all sorts of liniments and lotions, but got no relief, I doctored with several physicians, even going to Buffalo for treatment by a specialist there; but in no case did I ever receive more than temporary relief. It may be easily imagined that the pain I endured, told upon me in other ways and I became almost a physical wreck. At times my right leg would swell to nearly twice its normal size. Then the pain and swelling would shift to my left leg, and the agony was something awful. I suppose that during the period I was afflicted I have hundreds of times laid on my back on the floor with my foot and leg elevated on a chair in order to obtain slight ease from the pain I endured. The muscles and sinews in my legs looked as though they had twisted and tied in knots. The trouble went on this way until finally nothing but opiates would deaden the pain. A few years ago I read of a cure in a similar case through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and decided to try them. For some time after I began their use. I could not see that they were helping me, but I decided that I would give them a fair trial. By the time I had used a half dozen boxes, there was a decided improvement in my case, and I continued the use of the pills until I had taken twelve boxes, when I felt my cure was complete. Several years have since passed and I have had no return of the trouble, so I feel safe in saying that the cure has been permanent. I may also add that my wife has used the pills for indigestion, headaches and dizziness, and has found great benefit from yheff. Words cannot express the great benefit Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been to me, and I hope similar sufferers will profit by my experience." Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure by going to the root of the disease. They renew and build up the blood, and strengthen the nerves, thus driving disease from the system. If your dealer does not keep them, they will be sent postpaid at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.
