BEMOANING ITS FATE.

SOME OF THE ANNOYANCES OF RE-INCARNATION.

A Buddhist Baby Born Ten Days Ago and Just Entering the Sixth Race of the Fourth Round—Does Not Care for Its Latest Parents.

I have been born just ten days and I must say it is not at all the sort of thing that I was led to expect. Of course I have gone through it before; in fact, as I am just entering the sixth race of the fourth round I am a tolerably old hand at being born by this time. But I find myself quite unable to remember any of my previous babyhoods, and if they were at all like this one I don't regret it in the least. Existence in Devachan is exceedingly enjoyable in its way, but after the first few centuries or so it does get just the least bit dull. Consequently when the ripple of Karmic force approaches the edge of its subcyclic basin (I don't know whether you understand this, but I can assure you it is the correct way of expressing the situation), the being who is about to move from the Devachanic area of effects into the next area of causes by a fresh incarnation faces the prospect with a mild satisfaction. But when the job actually comes off it is distinctly disappointing. A Juggins—a monad, I should say—who passes into oblivion as a spiritual subjectivity and wakes up as a baby feels a legitimate irritation which parental blandishments rather aggravate than allay.

It would be difficult to overstate the indignities and discomforts of early incarnation. In Devachan one has no body to speak of being all "principles;" and though these are sometimes a little mixed, one soon learns to accommodate one's self to circumstances. But this arrangement breaks down hopelessly under the present system of being born. The simple fact is that at present I don't fit this confounded baby, and, my principles being roomy, I am tolerably cramped. I suppose that in due time my faculties will dwindle to the limits of their present abode, and with the disappearance of self-consciousness I shall at least be spared the annoyance which the knowledge of my infirmities are now causing me. But meanwhile I am having an exceedingly bad time of it. Of course when I last went to Devachan I left my fourth principle (kama rupa the animal soul, you know) behind me; and though it was a good enough sort of soul in its way, it had, to tell the truth, its little faults, and I soon grew quite reconciled to its absence.

I was, therefore, rather annoyed to find that it had rejoined me in my new quarters, particularly as I understand that its immediate business will be to work off old scores incurred during my last incarceration. I very soon got a taste of its quality too. In my previous earth life I was what you may call a bon vivant; indeed, my impression is that I died at table. Now, there is a solid dignity about the pleasures of the table which I should be the last to depreciate; but they are notoriously attended by certain little discomforts, which under ordinary circumstances are happily quite transient. In my case, however, the natural course of things was interrupted, and accordingly the earliest feature of my present babyhood was the one familiar sensation of a terrible "head" which my kama rupa had thoughtfully kept going for me during my Devachanic career. This was bad enough in all conscience, but my misery was aggravated by my helplessness. I found myself totally unable to do justice to the situation. I tried to swear (I was a distinguished military man in one of my earlier earth lives and the propensity has clung to me through several successive Karmas), but it was a dead failure, and I could achieve nothing more incisive than a bubble and squeak.

This unlucky incident at once brought my nurse to my side, and the idiot forthwith tried to counteract the effects of antenatal joviality by dosing me with dill. And this reminds me of another serious discomfort to which I have to submit. The cuisine of the nursery (including the cellar) is detestable, but I can exercise no effective control over it whatever. I weep and squeal vigorously whenever I detect any prospect of being fed, and I am not without hope that this causes my tormentors some anxiety, but its protective value is absolutely nil. About this same squealing, too, a precious lot of rubbish has been talked. One philosophical wiseacre, I remember, saw in the squalls of infancy a revelation of the baby's exalted nature, declaring that the Brat is "permeated with the certitude" that he is entitled to exact from the external world the satisfaction of his needs. Another sage of the same caliber considered the squall to denote the horror felt by the soul at being enslaved by nature. I know what my squalls mean. Temper, sir; good, honest adult temper, which, however, suffers exceedingly in vigor from the degraded mode of expression to which it is condemned. Of course, I shall soon forget all this nonsense, together with other relics of my past; but I wish I felt as certain that I shall not have to learn it all again. I am satisfied that my present parents will insist on giving me a first-rate education; they seem fools enough for anything. I should like to explain to my new mamma how cordially I hate her and all her works. Her attentions to me are overpowering, but I might put up with that if they were not so intolerably foolish. I can recollect myself as a man well over thirteen stone, with a florid complexion and a bulbous nose. Yet I have to submit to the ludicrous indignity of being addressed as "My precious!" Sometimes she woos me with a sort of clucking sounds as if I was a hen pheasant; and at others, when my attractions altogether overcome her, I find myself smothered in a flood of juicy caresses, which are actually intolerable to a misogynist. Worst of all, perhaps, are the degrading misapprehensions, of which I am constantly the victim. In my last earth life I had a fine barytone, and a day or two ago I tried to beguile the weary inaction of the cradle by practicing my low notes. The attempt, I must admit, was not a complete success, but any one with a grain of appreciation would have grasped the idea. As it was, my fool of a mamma sent for a fool of a doctor, who immediately treated me for croup. Hark! a footstep. It is she whom I am reluctantly unable to disobey—at present. And I am going to be exhibited to a circle of gushing friends. Happy thought! I will pretend to have convulsions. This will throw mamma into an agony, and will probably drive away her friends. Here goes!

DEATH RATE REDUCED.

Gratifying Report of the Dominion Health Bureau—Forty per cent. fewer deaths in Canada last year than ever before.

OTTAWA, June 25—The last report of the Health Bureau here contains the highly gratifying intelligence that the death rate in Canada during the last year was lower than in any previous year since Confederation, being within a fraction of forty per cent. lower than the best year ever before reported. Closer examination reveals that the greatest decrease was in deaths from Bsight's disease, Diabetes, Dropsy, Heart disease Rheumatism and other diseases caused by disordered or diseased kinneys. Further investigation shows that where the cases of such diseases have decreased, the people have within the year made free use of Dodd's Kidney Pills. Consequently it is safr to say that the falling off in Canada's death rate is due to nothing but Dodd's Kidney Pills.

THE ASIATIC PLAGUE

Raging at Hong Kong—Twelve Thousand Deaths Reported.

Late news from Hong Kong shows that the plague is increasing rather than diminishing in severity. The total for the 26th, 27th and 28th ult. were 66 new cases and 76 deaths, and there were hopes that the disease was showing signs of diminishing. On the 29th, however, 30 new cases were reported and 25 deaths; on the 30th, 33 new cases and 28 deaths; on the 31st, 41 new cases and 48 deaths, and on the 1st of June, 59 new cases and 54 deaths. The serious news is also published that an officer and three soldiers engaged in inspecting the slums have been attacked by the plague, but whether these belonged to the English or Indian regiments at Hong Kong is not stated. The imperial Chinese telegraph has communicated the following to the Shanghai papers dated Hong Kong, 29th May, 8.40 p. m.: Shauhing and Samshus districts are flooded two to three feet deep, and business is stopped. The rice fields at Tung Kun and Fatshan are submerged, and the river has risen four feet two inches. Nearly 4,000 dead rats were collected this month. The plague is decreasing in the Canton district.

Latest news from Canton is to the effect that although the plague was claiming less victims in that city than for weeks past, yet it is causing sad havoc in towns and villages to the northward and westward. In Hong Kong from May 31st to June 7th, 577 deaths are reported, 230 cases being under treatment. The total number from the outbreak to that date is about 12,000.

On June 9th the official Gazette announced that a telegram had been received by the Foreign Department from the Nagasaki prefect to the effect that the captain of the Pacific Mail steamer Peru, which arrived at Nagasaki on the 7th inst., from Hong Kong, via Amoy, reported to the sanitary officials at Nagasaki that one of the Chinese stokers of his ship was affected with the plague on the 4th inst., and died during the same night, his remains being at once buried at sea.

For cramps in the stomach take a few drops of Dr. Manning's german remedy, diluted in either warm or cold water. The effect is instantaneous. Sold by all druggists. .....

Indisputable.

Why spend $1 for a bottle of medicine for a complaint when one box of Beecham's pills, costing only 25 cents, will cure nearly a l known diseases? This is because constipation is the cause of nearly all ailments and Beecham's pills cure constipation. A valuable book of knowledge mailed free, on request, by B. F. Allen & Co., 365 Canal St. New York.

All who desire to avoid imposition and be cured, should insist on having Pond's Extract, put up only in bottles, with our landscape tradmark, on surrounding buff wrapper. .....
