

STUDENTS FORCE PROF TO CHANGE HIS METHODS

MONTREAL (CUP)—A group of Concordia University students recently discovered that student activism still works. Students in a second year marketing course became angry when their professor failed to change his irrelevant exam questions and inadequate office hours after meeting with the marketing department and the professor, R.A. Marcus. In protest, they circulated a confidential petition in their class that 16 of 32 students signed and presented to the department's chair, Peter Pasold. A solution was found. Students will receive the better of two grades from either their final exam or a combination of class tests and assignments. At Marcus' suggestion, someone else will mark the final exam. While some students said the solution was fair, another said, "it just can't make up for a whole semester."
