Burhoe, Harold Smith, R. H. Barton, William Knorr. The Masonic burial service at the grave was conducted by Harry Johnston.

ENJOYABLE DINNER — A very enjoyable goose dinner and chicken was held at the home of Wilma Heston September 29. Many friends came from Charlottetown, Summerside and Miscouche and spoke in glowing terms of the hospitality accorded them by the ladies in charge. A delightful dance and splendid music were enjoyed by all, with the music supplied by Leo and Mrs. Farrell of Lot 16, assisted by Miss Erma MacNeill and Mrs. Edgar Hickie. A pleasing feature of the evening was the drawing of a fruit cake won by a lucky girl, Linda Callaghan.

ENCOURAGING REPORT — Father Coghlan announced in Holy Redeemer Church on Sunday last that the Memorial Committee of the campaign for the new Redemptorist Seminary had turned in a very favorable report. The sum of $8,750.00 has already been pledged. The Memorial Committee under the chairmanship of Dr. Loyola Duffy will continue to function. The general phase of the campaign will begin shortly. Mr. Ivan Berrigan and Mr. Frank O'Neill are co-chairmen of this committee. A request was made for volunteer workers for the general campaign. The response was very gratifying. A special training will be given to all volunteer workers the nights of Oct. 13 and 14. The campaign will open officially on the following Sunday, Oct. 17.

NOTE OF CAUTION While Paris was optimistic over chances for eventual assembly approval of the new plan, a note of caution crept into West Germany's generally hopeful view.

In Bonn, independent newspapers warned that the London conference package was not yet wrapped and tied. One said there was a "general air of tension" over the role the French assembly will play.

Various West German political parties, including Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's own Christian Democrat Union, were still studying the texts released Sunday in London. CDU's press erva said the "practical ending of the occupation era" in West Germany was the most important result at London.

but the West German Socialists, who have sharply criticized Adenauer's European negotiations, issued a press statement repeating their view that this is a time for caution and not for big words that may fail to develop into big deeds.

STEP FORWARD In Rome, Italian Premier Mario Scelba said the speed with which the Western Allies achieved the London agreements "proves that the lessons of Second World War were not in vain."

He called the conference "a decided step forward in the cause of Western solidarity, liberty and peace."

Under the new agreements Italy as well as West Germany will be added to the Brussels alliance.

In Ottawa, Prime Minister St. Laurent said he was sure results achieved in London would satisfy all those interested in the peace and stability of the western world. The Communist world contributed four notes, as expected, in Berlin, Fritz Beyling, press chief for the Communist-controlled East German government, said the London agreements had increased political tension and "alarmed the whole German people."

Trinity Churchmen Hold Supper Meeting

"Youth Will Be Saved" was the subject of a very interesting address given last night by Mr. Gordon Maxwell, general secretary of the Charlottetown YMCA, at the monthly supper meeting of the Trinity United Churchmen. The President-elect, Mr. Ches Cooper, presided.

Almost 100 members of the Association sat down to a delicious supper served by the "King's Daughters." The meeting opened by the singing of the Doxology, followed by Grace by Rev. Howard Christie. The guest speaker was introduced by Mr. Earl Taylor, President of the Charlottetown YMCA. He was thanked by Mr. Kenneth Parker.

Immediately following the supper, Mr. Stan Lancaster led the group in a sing-song. This was followed by two delightful piano solos by Mr. George Thompson, church organist. Rev. A. Frank MacLean brought the meeting to a close with the benediction.

"Youth is an urgent period of life," said Mr. Maxwell, "things happen now, and they cannot be put off." He continued, "Either we will be prepared to serve Youth, or it will get that service somewhere else."

The speaker went on to show that during the 30's many of the activities of Youth organizations were curtailed through lack of finances and pointed out that it was difficult to get young people back. He spoke of the Canada Youth Organization and related how undesirable influences had crept in because of the fact that they were better organized.

The YMCA Secretary, whose father was a YMCA physical director, gave his audience a brief account of how he became associated with the work of that organization. His chief reason for this decision, he stated, "was because he had a sense of being associated with a constructive force and a part of a world fellowship."

Mr. Maxwell said it was hard to analyze the needs of youth but felt that they fell into the following: group, physical, security, recognition and affection. In trying to determine "what governs a child's conduct," a moral knowledge test was devised.

The findings of this test said the speaker were quite interesting. In dividing the various influences of the home, his playmates, the school and the church school, it was found that the home showed the greatest correlation with the child's behavior. "In other words," said Mr. Maxwell, "the moral knowledge of the child, seldom rises above that of the home."

"We don't learn by being told," said the speaker, "we learn from facing the issues of the present day. If the child is to get guidance and help, outside the home, it will only be as his life can be associated in living groups with the proper leadership," he concluded.

Jerry Giesler, filmtown lawyer, announced Miss Monroe would seek a divorce at once and would charge mental cruelty. He said she broke off because of incompatibility.

"They've talked it over and reached a pleasant understanding," he said.

SEEMED AFFECTIONATE Only a handful of intimates knew there was trouble brewing. On Sept. 9, the famed calendar girl flew to New York for longings of "Seven Year Itch." She was slated to return Sept. 12, but a hurricane delayed her. Joe flew to join her.

"They seemed to be very much in love," said a studio source who was with them. "They are not the demonstrative type, but they appeared to be warmly affectionate."

They flew back here together Sept. 16. Last week he returned to New York to cover the world series for a syndicate. She continued working in her picture.

She was scheduled to work this morning, but called the studio and said she couldn't make it. The schedule was quickly rearranged and she slotted around her. Then she told the studio of the split-up.

LITTLE IN COMMON An intimate reported they had little in common. Before she met the baseball star, she had little or no interest in sports. He was publicly shy and refused to stand in the spotlight that surrounded her. Until this year, his career interests were on the east coast, while she earned her living here.

He gave up his New York television work so they could spend more time together here. But she started working almost as soon as she returned from the honeymoon and has seldom had a day off since.

Recently in New York, Marilyn denied reports that Joe spent many nights away from home playing poker.

Marilyn, the star whom the public has seen more of than any other, underwent a change after the marriage. She was always available to the press before, giving out with quotes like: "I don't like sunbaths because I like to feel blonde all over." But since her marriage to Joe, she was less available and failed to sparkle with the spicy quotes for which she became famous.

It is the second marriage failure for both. Marilyn, 26, married an aircraft worker, James Dougherty, when she was 15. She divorced him two years later. DiMaggio, 39, was married to actress Dorothy Arnold. They had a son, Joe Jr.

BUSTLE AT EMPLOYMENT OFFICE AS WORK ON FEDERAL BLDG. SITE STARTS

There was considerable bustle at the local office of the National Employment Service yesterday with many men seeking work on the new Federal building where preliminary operations are to commence this morning.

The County Construction Co. which has the contract for the demolition of the old buildings on the site, secured a crew of men for the employment office during the busy day. All of the men were laborers. It is possible that more men will be needed as the work progresses.

Potato growers from various parts of the Province were also looking for men at a dozen points. There is every indication, say Employment officials, that the harvesting of the tuber crop is speeding up to a seasonal peak.

Some of the potato pickers sent to growers were from the mainland, but others were island residents.

A prominent Queen's County apple and fruit grower contributed to the demand for workers during the day by calling for a dozen men. These will work in Southport and be transported to and from the village, opposite Charlottetown daily.

Miscellaneous orders from several Charlottetown employers swelled the number of employment opportunities and played a part in making Monday anything but a blue day.

With other building projects in view and the potato shipping season just around the corner, Employment officials anticipate a good autumn employment season.

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian Federation of Agriculture Monday called the Canadian wool textile industry "over-expanded and inefficient" and found itself in hot water with the tariff board for making so sweeping a statement.

The statement was contained in a brief presented to the board by CFA economist Dr. E. C. Hope as argument against the Canadian wool textile industry's application for a higher tariff against competing British wool cloth.

F. J. Ledue, deputy chairman of the board, said, "You have no proof" for such a statement. "It doesn't prove your case and might hurt somebody."

Dr. Hope replied that he felt the statement was no more sweeping than many made in support of a higher tariff.

Board member W. W. Buchanan said the efficiency of an industry "is very, very difficult to get at."

The discussion ended when board chairman Hector McKinnon suggested: "We are generating more heat than light."

DOUBT HE SAID DOWN The CFA said a study of the wool textile industry shows: 1. Sales drops from 1948-52 were due not to wool imports but "rather the sharp decline in the domestic consumption of woollen fabrics."

2. Depressed conditions in the industry also were due in part to inroads by synthetic fabrics.

It added: "It seems clear that the woollen cloth industry underwent a hazardous over-expansion, primarily as a result of wartime demand and secondly because of a post-war period of strong demand at a time when the United Kingdom woollen textile industry was going through a period of reconstruction."

Some 29 plants chartered by British woolen firms "must have been of very low capacity" since only 1,148 employees were added to the total working force.

J. Grant Glasco, Toronto accountant representing the Canadian textile industry, said 19 of these plants were established on a handicraft basis. They were small and "many have gone by the boards."

The CFA brief added: "Higher tariffs against British woollen fabrics would undoubtedly reduce imports from Britain and make it more difficult for Britain to buy farm products from Canada."

NOT ALL-BRITISH? Earlier, the Canadian Allied Textile Trades Association suggested some British woolen and worsted goods to Canada might not be "in the true sense of the meaning" of British Empire origin. The CATT said it would be easy for a United Kingdom mill to import unfinished cloth from Europe, complete the "relatively minor finishing operation" and then export the product to Canada as a "British Empire product" under the British preferential tariff.

Gordon Henderson, counsel for the British woolen industry, asked CATT president Fred Taylor whether the suggestion was not based on "pure supposition." Mr. Taylor agreed that it was, "but it wasn't something I dreamed up."

Commonwealth Trade Talks To Begin Today

LONDON, (Reuters)—More than 80 delegates representing the 30 countries and colonies of the British Commonwealth will begin today the most important Commonwealth trade conference for six years.

The week-long conference will try to hammer out a joint Commonwealth policy on the future of the 34-nation General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), the post-war world's trading charter founded in 1948. The ninth full session of GATT starts in Geneva Oct. 28.

The Commonwealth delegates have four major questions to discuss: 1. Japan's admission to full membership.

2. Their attitude to the world trade rules laid down in the general agreement, which comes up for revision in Geneva.

3. The future of imperial preferences.

4. The trading problems which would follow if sterling were freely convertible into gold or dollars.

Canada has a delegation of eight, led by A. F. W. Plumtree.

Makes Two-Day Visit At Ottawa

Vice-president of India, Servapalli Radhabinthan, is on a two-day visit to Ottawa. He was met at the airport by Prime Minister St. Laurent. Purpose of the visit is believed to be for trade talks with Canadian officials.

Max Ferguson, better known to Maritimers as "Rawhide" who will appear this evening during the Old Time Fiddling and Step-Dancing competitions at the Forum, is a native of Durham, England who has spent most of his life in London, Ontario.

Max graduated from the University of Western Ontario in 1948 and began his career as a radio announcer in London. A few months later he joined the CBC and went to Halifax where he found himself shoe heir to a hill-billy show.

After the first show he drew an unprecedented number of 3,000 fan letters a day. His show has been a success ever since.

Max is a man of many voices. During a show as many as fourteen different characters, all interpreted by him, put in an appearance.

French Security Probe Continues

PARIS (AP) — Jacques Duclos, No. 2 man in the French Communist party, will be summoned for questioning by the magistrate investigating leaks of vital French military secrets, security officers said Monday night.

Duclos, deputy to Secretary-General Maurice Thorez and actual leader of the party during Thorez' continuing long illness, will be confronted with Andre Baranes, Baranes a Communist journalist, has admitted that he is a Communist party agent and that he has given the party secret information on meetings of the national defence council. He also has been described as a police tipster.

Duclos returned only three days ago from the Soviet Union where he was vacationing with Thorez.

The defence leaks case, still catching big headlines in the French press, was marked Monday by a long search by a dozen police inspectors in the offices of the pro-Communist newspaper Liberation, where Baranes was employed. Police also raided the home of Liberation's managing editor, Emmanuel d'Astier de la Vigerie, a pro-Communist member of the National Assembly. De la Vigerie was summoned to give testimony to the magistrate Wednesday also.

Interior ministry sources said the investigating magistrate also planned to hear reports this week week by a galaxy of former ministers and high state officials among them were Georges Bidault, foreign minister in the Laniel cabinet and Rene Pleven, then defence minister.

Gen. Alphonse Juin, commander-in-chief of Allied forces in central Europe, and Gen. Pierre Koenig, former national defence minister, also are expected to be heard.

A former employee of the code department at the defence ministry, Mme. Metivier Lasseron, disclosing ciphered cables received at the defence ministry were submitted to "strange handling" in a long written statement to the magistrate she said the code was known to the Communist party, "which could then decipher communications from the Indochina war, notable during the Dien Bien Phu siege."
