MYSTERY GLASS WORK.

FLOWERS IN GLASS THAT ARE MANUFACTURED BY EXPERTS.

The Only Firm in the World Which Has Preserved the Middle Ages Plan of Keeping Their Business Processes Secret —The Results.

In the time of the middle ages almost all trades or handicrafts had their mysteries, and a workman who was taught all the processes of the work had to take a solemn oath not to betray the secret. It is very different now. If you visit the great factories the proprietor or foreman will show you how the complicated machinery works; papers and books are crowded with articles explaining various processes.

Still, some of the secrets of handicraft remain. One of the most interesting of these is the wonderful art of the Blaschkas, which no other worker in glass has been able to learn or in any way to imitate. The work is so unique and beautiful that you will be interested in hearing of the exquisite and marvelous results, even if all the processes of manipulation must remain a mystery. Leopold and Rudolph Blaschka—father and son—are from Bohemia, a country famous for its work in glass. The father is upward of 70 years old, but both he and his son are active and skilled workers. For a long time they worked in glass, making models of sea creatures for museums and colleges. About seven years ago they began making the works for which they are now so famous. not only the most exact reproductions in glass of flowers in their natural size, so perfect that the rich red cactus blossoms look soft and velvety, and our yellow cowslip shows its satiny sheen, and the little white anemone trembles and bends on its slender stalk, but also all the microscopic parts of the flower—almost invisible to the naked eye—on such a magnified scale that a student may at any time study these hidden things of the plant world without a lens or a specimen.

The Blaschkas live near Dresden. They have there a fine collection of tropical plants—orchids being a specialty. Rudolph Blaschka, the son, has made several journeys to South America to obtain rare specimens of these queer plants of vivid colors, spotted and streaked with scarlet and gold and green, or marked with silver and gold traceries and powdered with copper dust. Besides the tropical collection there is a large "garden" of what we call weeds and wild flowers, for the Blaschkas' handicraft shows us some exquisite arrangements in our common roadside flowers.

The Blaschka work is especially interesting and fine in its models of the orchids—those velvety, fluttering air blossoms of the tropics that so wonderfully mimic insect life in their strange shapes. It was, in fact, the exhibition of the golden butterfly orchid, with its long, antennælike petals and wings, as if just poised for flight, at a London flower show that started orchid culture in England. The spider and bee orchids often deceive the eye at first glance, and a branch of the moth orchid, which grows on the limestone rocks of the Philippine Islands, looks like a crowd of downy, spotted moths about to fly away. Other strange likenesses are found in the pure white dove and swan orchids, the lizard orchid and the lynx flower. Some are veritable clowns and jesters of the forest world, with elongated petals like "odd, wagging lips," and tongues thrust out in derision, or growing apparently on their heads in midair, as if engaged in a continual trapeze act. Owing to the fine botanical garden and greenhouses at Cambridge a visitor to the Blaschka work has a rare opportunity of comparing the living flowers and their marvelous reproduction in crystalline texture with each other. He will find that these modern glassworkers of Bohemia have not only ingenuity and manipulative skill, but a wonderful artistic insight as well.

Creatures That Tumble Upward.

It is only reasonable to suppose that the ability to sustain an enormous pressure can only be acquired by animals after generations of gradual migrations from shallow waters, says a writer in the Popular Science Monthly. Those forms that are brought up by the dredge from the depths of the ocean are usually killed and distorted by the enormous and rapid diminution of pressure in their journey to the surface, and it is extremely probable that shallow water forms would be similarly killed and crushed out of shape were they suddenly plunged into very deep water. The fish that live at these enormous depths are, in consequence of the enormous pressure, liable to a curious form of accident. If, in chasing their prey or for any other reason, they rise to a considerable distance above the floor of the ocean, the gases of their swimming bladder become considerably expanded and their specific gravity very greatly reduced. Up to a certain limit the muscles of their bodies can counteract the tendency to float upward and enable the fish to regain its proper sphere of life at the bottom; but beyond that limit the muscles are not strong enough to drive the body downward, and the fish, becoming more and more distended as it goes, is gradually killed on its long and involuntary journey to the surface of the sea. The deep sea fish, then, are exposed to a danger that no other animals in the world are subject to—namely, that of tumbling upward? That such accidents do occasionally occur is evidenced by the fact that some fish, which are now known to be true deep sea forms, were discovered dead and floating on the surface of the ocean long before our modern investigations were commenced.

A Woman Revolutionist.

It is said that one of the leaders of the Brazilian revolutionists is a woman—Madame de Matos. She is described as about thirty years old, with blue eyes and blonde hair. In the field she is attired in a dress which is a mixture of men's and women's attire. Many anecdotes of her courage are told, as also of her great kindness and generosity. She seems to consider herself as a sort of Joan of Arc, and similarly called to the service of her country. We wish her a kinder fate.

A Word to Breeders.

In choosing a male for breeding purposes, you want to select a typical animal of some established breed. You can calculate then with reasonable certainty upon the result.

ALL THREE CURED.

Neil McKechnie, with his wife and mother-in-law Cured of Constipation by Dodd's Kidney Pills—These Pills better Than Ordinary Cathartics.

TORONTO, Feb. 19.—Neil McKechnie, a popular barber of this city, has been a sufferer from chronic constipation for years. He used Dodd's Kidney Pills and not only obtained immediate relief, but a permanent cure. His wife and mother-in-law were similarly afflicted, and used these pills with the same good result. Ordinary cathartics give only temporary relief and leave the patient worse than before using them. While Dodd's Kidney Pills are not cathartics, their peculiar action on the liver and kidneys is such that the causes of constipation are permanently removed. These pills are manufactured by Dr. L. A Smith & Co., Toronto, and are sold by all dealers, or will be mailed on receipt of price; fifty cents per box, or six boxes for $2.50.
