Opening lead—king of clubs.

You just can't play bridge mechanically, or the first thing you know you find yourself right behind the eight ball.

One of the best players in the business fell apart at the seams on this hand. But before describing the details, let's say a word about the bidding.

There's some doubt whether it isn't the best policy for South to respond directly with four spades over the opening diamond bid. One has to be of a pretty pessimistic nature to be willing to settle for less than a game contract with the South hand.

Once this is granted, South might just as well go directly to game, rather than bid a spade first and later force to game. The leap to four spades shows just about the type of hand South has—solid trumps and good game prospects. Slam aspirations are at the same time denied.

West opened the king of clubs and followed with the ace. East playing high-low. West continued with the queen and declarer ruffed in dummy with the nine, hoping West had the ten.

East overruffed, however, and returned the king of hearts. Declarer, having lost three tricks already, had to win with the ace in dummy. His cause was hopeless. He was beaten regardless of how the opponents' cards were divided.

He cashed the A - K of diamonds, discarding a heart, but when he led the queen East naturally trumped, and South ended losing a heart trick for down one.

The hand was easy to make. All South had to do was refuse to trump the third club lead in dummy. By conceding the queen of clubs to West, declarer retains in dummy the spade which he vitally needs for ready communication to his hand to extract the adverse trumps.

It goes against the grain, of course, to allow West's queen of clubs to win the trick without putting up a fight against it. But this view is shortsighted. Protecting the contract is far more important. Ruffing in dummy is much too dangerous.

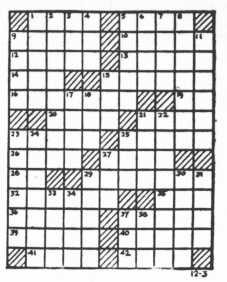
Yesterday's Answer



DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X E
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

A Cryptogram Quotation

Z U K U A U F E X R P S U X R I K U F G H
W V I K V X U K V Z Z I U A U P R K P V N W K
