Hungarian Rabbi Charges Discrimination In Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — A young Hungarian rabbi has charged some of Toronto's more elite organizations with racial and religious discrimination.

Rabbi Andre Ungar, who was expelled from South Africa for his outspoken criticism of the racial segregation policy there, made his charges at a meeting of a Young Adult Brotherhood council in a Unitarian church Tuesday night.

"There is a club close at hand which refuses membership to Roman Catholics, Negroes, Jews or French-Canadians," he said.

He later told reporters he was referring to Toronto's Granite Club and added that the Royal Canadian Yacht Club and the Toronto Stock Exchange also practise discrimination.

L. E. Messinger, chairman of the Granite Club's board of directors, denied the charge. He said Mr. Ungar didn't know what he was talking about.

"RABBLE ROUSER"

"He's just a rabble rouser," he said. "He was thrown out of Africa for his stand on color."

Mr. Messinger said William Fisher, present club president, is a Roman Catholic. Other Roman Catholics had been members of the club's executive.

"There is nothing in our constitution that prevents a person from becoming a Granite Club member because of race, creed or color," he added.

Rabbi Ungar retorted:

"Subject to my information, discrimination is practised in Toronto not only by the Granite Club but by a whole class of institutions . . . half a dozen golf clubs, the Royal Yacht Club.

"Although a large volume of the business done on the Toronto Stock Exchange is done by Jews, no Jew can at this time be a member of the exchange."

When told of Mr. Messinger's reply, the rabbi said: "I should be very happy to be proved wrong —not by quotations from constitutions, but with statistical evidence of membership."

A spokesman for the Toronto Stock Exchange said there is nothing in its constitution to bar Jews. The requirement for membership stipulates only that they must be 21 and of British birth.

"There are no Jewish members at present because none has applied," the spokesman said.

Col. F. N. Ovens, secretary of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club, also denied the charges. There was nothing in the club's constitution "about race, religion or creed."

"It is a private club," he said, "and the members have the right to decide on membership. No one can demand membership."
