

MR. AND MRS. D.W. CUDMORE

Kirk Of St. James Is Scene Of Pretty Wedding

St. James Presbyterian Church was the scene of a very pretty wedding on June 6th at 3:00 p.m. when Rev. A. Frank MacLennan united in marriage Frances Eaman Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A.M. Clark and Douglas Wendall Cudmore, son of Mr. and Mrs. W.R. Cudmore in a double ring ceremony.

The Girls' and Boys' Gallery Choir under the direction of Miss E. Lillian MacKenzie sang "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden" and "The Lord's Prayer". Mrs. David Cox was soloist and sang "The Wedding Prayer". The floral theme was yellow and white.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiant in a portrait gown of silk organza, with flowing bouffant skirt, eye-catching appliques of lace with sequin trim on the fitted bodice. Matching applique was featured on the sabrina neckline. The sleeves were long and came to a point. The crown headpiece was of silk organza with a tulle illusion finger-tip veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of white feathered carnations.

Miss Jessie McGowan, Halifax, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Marian Clark, sister of the bride and Miss Joan Cudmore, sister of the groom. Miss Linda Clark, sister of the bride, was junior bridesmaid. The attendants wore identical gowns of silk organza over taffeta featuring the bouffant length skirt, cap sleeves and scoop neck. The gloves were wrist-length. The matron of honor was in shrimp shade, bridesmaids in aqua. All carried nosegays of white snapdragons with a yellow rose in the center. The junior bridesmaid wore pink and carried a basket of pink, yellow and white snapdragons.

David MacDonald was best man. The ushers were Donald Clark, Earl Jewell, David Stewart and Ralph Whitehead.

Mrs. Clark, mother of the bride,

NEW SCARF FASHIONS

A SILK scarf isn't just a scarf anymore. Nowadays it is a real fashion accessory, wise in the ways of doing things, for many types of clothes, as well as adding charm and color. Among the new designs is this one of white silk twill with a long-stemmed red rose print. Sized at a versatile 24-inch square, the scarf lends itself to draping over a choker, filling in an open neckline, or tied as an ascot inside a suit jacket.

Gullison Twins Kept Busy With So Many Engagements

The weekend supplement of the Palo Alto Times carries a front page picture of the Gullison twins. This picture was snapped a moment after Leisha and Patricia Gullison had been proclaimed winners of the 1959 "Miss Palo Alto" contest.

It seems impossible to think of two beauty queens in the same city but why not? They're twins! The twins were apprehensive that although they had won the battle they might lose the war—that is never even admitted to the Miss California contest.

Beauty, personality and talent the twins have in abundance but they were up against a set of rules obviously drafted without thought to the possibility of twin beauty queens. However, these rules have been set aside and the twins are now to try for Miss California.

The Times devotes another two pages to pictures of the twins. They are shown in an interpretive "Jungle Dance" which they had created themselves. Mrs. Elsie Gullison, Menlo Park nursery school operator, helps her daughters dress before the final judging. This is such a pretty picture before the frilled vanity tables covered with perfume and engagement cards.

The twins are also shown in silent prayer before the final decision of the judges. Then the gleeful embrace after the announcement. Modelling, radio and television engagements have already poured in and many accepted. These have included college clothes which the twins modeled on the Stanford University campus and yachting clothes with the twins at the helm.

The twins have had fan mail from England, Canada and of course, all parts of the United States. They and their mother were guests of honor of Palo Alto senior Chamber of Commerce at their annual membership dinner. The entertainment part of this evening was entitled "A Night in the South Seas" and was under the direction of Gerhart Fischer.

June 25, 26, 27, and 28 will be

LAKE VERDE W. I.

Mrs. Venanches Curley and Mrs. Joseph Curley entertained the members of the Lake Verde Women's Institute at their home on Wednesday night, June 10th.

Mrs. Joseph Shea, president, opened the meeting in the usual manner with the reading of the creed. Roll call was answered by waisting measurement. Miss Irene Quinn drew the lucky number.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read, approved and signed. One sickcall was reported. Mrs. Francis Kelly and Mrs. William Shea were appointed on the committee.

Money was voted for Convention expenses and to buy a treat for the children for school closing.

Mrs. Joseph Curley and Mrs. Frances Kelly were appointed to attend the annual convention at Charlottetown on July 7 and 8th. Bills amounting to $1.35 were paid. Collection amounted to $1.61.

The members are invited to the home of Mrs. William Shea for their meeting in July. Roll call a penny for each letter in your name.

The meeting then adjourned. During a pleasant social hour a delicious lunch was served by Mrs. Joseph Curley, assisted by Mrs. Francis Kelly.

IS MORE CORDIAL

Where did I fall? Why are my other three children so different from Beth? The second daughter, with whom I reside, is wonderful to me and appreciates the little chores I do for her. She doesn't want me to go back to Beth's again. She says "I don't want you to get hurt, Mother." My other children think it would be foolish, too. But as they have no children and can't fathom a grandmother's love of her grandchildren, it's no use trying to make them understand.

We intend to visit all the family in July; and I am thinking of asking Beth to let me stay with or nearby her household. I am very lonely, not seeing them for so long a time. Guess you will think I haven't much pride; but I always humble myself. I don't care about clothes or anything any more; just exist from day to day.

My daughter, with whom I live,

MARY HAWORTH Do Not Attach Self To This Household

Dear Mary Haworth: I am a widow with no money, only a small income. I raised four children practically myself. They are all good, honest and intelligent, but of course they have faults.

My greatest problem is my eldest daughter, I'll call her Beth, who doesn't want me living in her home. When I went back there a second time, at my request, I was hedged in with many restrictions. No talking over the phone, or to neighbors, or having friends in. Make myself scarce when my son-in-law is around. Sleep in the basement (not in the children's room, as before), etc.

Out of love for my grandchildren I accepted these conditions. Of course I love my daughter, too. I endured the situation for 10 months, and when finally I left again—sad at heart to part from my darling grandchildren—I was told I can't go back. But I want to, more than anything in this world. I am not bitter or vindictive; there isn't anything I wouldn't do for them all, if I could.

and I appreciate your answers, so straightforward and truthful. Please help me. T.S.

AN EVALUATION

Dear T.S.: Apropos your extraordinary stick-to-it-iveness, in trying to win a place for yourself in your grandchildren's lives you admit that you haven't much pride; that you always humble yourself. And perhaps you think this is good?

Well, the virtue of the lowly submissive air, in a troubled relationship depends upon the spirit or intention behind it. If the idea is to use meekness as a device for getting one's own way, when one's not equipped to use bulldozer tactics, then the lowly attitude isn't particularly godly. Rather, it is expedient and political.

The real essence of humility consists in putting aside one's own feelings, desires or preferences, in order to yield first place to the rights or claims of others, when your wishes conflict with theirs.

VOTE AGAINST

Also, courtesy is the hallmark of true humility. And genuine courtesy never makes selfish or self-centered demands upon others—never campaigns for special consideration or sentimental tolerance, at the expense of the others' comfort. Courtesy never intrudes its heartbreak on others. The saints characteristically bear their sorrows in secret—turning a serene sunny face to observers.

And it appears that you are far from being a saint, on this score.

I vote against your trying any further to attach yourself to Beth's household. As you have other children who find you more congenial than she does, who don't mind having you around, you lack justification for intruding into her family life, when she plainly doesn't want you there.

FACE REALITY

Probably your basic problem with Beth, the source of your frustration and persistence in respect to her, is simply the fact that you are never were compatible. And as you grow older, you feel remorseful about this, as if it were somehow your fault—which it most likely isn't at all. You fancy, unconsciously, that given another chance at physical closeness to Beth, you might win her heart and her approval—despite repeated proof that she's just in contrariness towards you. Mother-daughter allergies of this kind aren't uncommon; and where they exist, it is sensible to accept the reality and plan accordingly. In short, live apart in mutual good will—thus cutting down on wretched quarreling. M.H.
