

MR. AND MRS. MALCOLM CARTER

On Their Wedding Day Couple Visit Monastery

Tuesday, July 1st. at 8.30 a.m. the church of the Most Holy Redeemer was the scene of a pretty wedding when Bernardine Helen, daughter of Mrs. and the late Lawrence Hennessey was united in Christ in the sacrament of matrimony to Malcolm John Carter, son of Mrs. and the late Michael Carter, Montreal.

Given in marriage by her brother Maurice, Bernardine looked charming in her bridal attire which was styled in the fitted fashion. The dress, with scalloped neckline and three quarter sleeve, was floor length and made of a delicate brocaded nylon over taffeta. Her bouquet was pink and red roses.

The bride's attendants were her sister Rosalie as maid-of-honour and a close friend, Miss Joan Vail as bridesmaid. They both looked charming in street-length dresses of faille in colors of yellow and mint green respectively with white accessories. Their bouquets were nosegays of mums in tinted colours to match their dresses.

The bride's mother looked most youthful in a navy nylon duster, over a navy dress showered with white polka dots. Her accessories were powder blue in colour with a corsage of pink roses.

The groom's mother was most attractively dressed in a suit of grey with pink accessories and a corsage of yellow roses. Best man for the Hennessey-Carter wedding was Robert Fulton, close friend of the groom. Ushers were Mr. Lorne Hennessey, brother of the bride, and Garry Diron, nephew of the bride.

Throughout the Mass five appropriate hymns were rendered most effectively by Mrs. M. A. Hughes, sister of the bride, accompanied by Mr. Alex McLean.

ELLEN'S DIARY

R. L. Stevenson Essay Is One To Be Remembered

The lawn is flecked fetchingly light and dark now in the moonlight that steals through the leafy branches. We note, here on the front veranda, there is dew on the grass in token of continuing fine weather ahead for the farmers.

A bird chirps sleepily, the sound accented in the stillness about. Or can it be the heart asks breathlessly, the cheep of a first cricket come to commence now that song that is the thrum of the year?

No, it is a bird—a robin perhaps, or one of the sparrows that neighbor with us in an eave's nook of this house.

The "popple" leaves stir... and are still... and move again in mysterious night-rustles. Down in the valley, a car turning, picks out in its lights the gable of the mill. An angler's ear doubtless, he is having fished on into this dusk.

In the house on the hill first lights come on, and in that across the lane. But the children, home from the haying, seem loath to leave the summer-night so lovely. Seated together, they swing in the rope-swing which hangs on the birch tree. Swing, and chatter, and laugh, and it is good to hear them, young and happy as they are.

At the bar last choring is in progress: perhaps a pot of meal is being carried to the herdside to add bloom to the coat he wears to the Fair, should the haying be completed by then.

How smartly the mows and lofts fill these days! And knowing of the plenty being gathered, we think what a favored island this is, that gives such nice returns from the soil. Not always No. odd years in our long memory have been somewhat lean, yet in our time there has been no famine. The pinch of scarcity

MRS. J. CEPHAS WARD

59 Yrs. Teaching Music Is This Lady's Record

Proudly and gladly Mrs. J. Cephas Ward 202 Queen Street, Truro, Nova Scotia will tell you that she will be truly seventy-eight years young on November 18th. Mrs. Ward was formerly Miss Daisy Suttis, daughter of Captain Suttis, who ran the old M. A. Starr between Pictou and Charlottetown.

This remarkable lady who is on her annual visit to Prince Edward Island has many relatives in this province particularly through her husband's family. She is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Duncan. She will also visit in Murray Harbour, James Caulfield, who was in the bank in Charlottetown at one time, is a son-in-law. Mr. Caulfield is now head of the firm Caulfield Motors, Truro.

Mrs. Ward has a great deal of knowledge and a mind like quicksilver but the word retirement is one with which she does not seem to be familiar. She has been teaching music for fifty-nine years and received her early musical education in this province from the late Professor S. N. Earle. "We always called him Daddy Earle," says Mrs. Ward of the veteran Island musician.

Mrs. Ward has a large class and is very busy at Music Festival time. She takes a prominent part in the musical life of the community. One of her chief musical contributions is that of putting on concerts in churches and thereby raising funds.

Mrs. Ward has a printing office of her own. She writes poetry and composes music. At present she is working on a book of children's stories which will soon be ready for publication. "I intend to take up writing when I get too old to play," said Mrs. Ward.

A daily schedule with several intervals for practise is rigidly adhered to by Mrs. Ward. At seven-thirty this wonderful person really rises to shine. She has a light breakfast. Then the immaculate - kept small apartment is put in order. At nine Mrs. Ward begins to "play." She never calls it practise. Here is a tip for psychologically minded music teachers. She plays for an hour and a half. Then she drops in at the printing office and "goes after the advertising," pays bills and sees to other clerical matters about the office.

At twenty minutes to twelve, not a minute under not a minute over she has dinner - again not too heavy a meal. "See how I've kept my figure," said Mrs. Ward almost twirling around for all to admire a neat little Princess figure.

Asked if she rested after dinner, Mrs. Ward says: "Not always - only if I feel tired." At this point we were hardly prepared for this admission! After dinner she takes a long walk. At one time she read "always walk to music." So while walking Mrs. Ward most reverently sings mentally "Onward Christian Soldiers. A prominent Truro citizen said to her recently "You always carry your head so erectly." How could one droop the head while marching, singing and walking!

When school is out this lady really gets going because then she begins her teaching day. Supper is at six and after that she often teaches, plays at meetings or attends prayer meeting and plays of course at these meetings.

Mrs. Ward had an invalid husband for twenty years to whom she gave most devoted and loving care. He died six years ago and then she sold her two houses and took the aforementioned apartment.

She has been the organist in the Truro Heights Baptist church for twenty five years. Her mother had taught her children the Bible so thoroughly that Mrs. Ward had such a knowledge of the Bible that she was at one time superintendent of the Truro Heights Sunday School. This church is a branch of the First Baptist Church in Truro.

The Lewisville Baptist Church in Moncton had Mrs. Ward play for seven years when her husband and his brother were working on the Moncton Transcript.

When Mrs. Ward returned to play one time at the Lewisville Church the Transcript ran the heading in among the church no-
