TROUBLE ALONG THE WAY. STARS JOHN WAYNE, CAPITOL SUMMERSIDE

—"Trouble Along the Way," the long-awaited comedy-drama starring John Wayne, Donna Reed and Charles Coburn, comes to the Capitol Theatre today.

The Warner Bros. production, newest on John Wayne's busy schedule, has the popular star in a role made to order for him. It's the two-fisted part that "Duke" Wayne likes best and since leaving the University of Southern California football field some years back right through to his award-winning characterization of "The Quiet Man," Wayne has been on top of the popularity polls.

Donna Reed, one of the prettiest lasses in Hollywood, is a farmer's daughter who came to the city and made good. A product of Iowa, Donna has been a star whose wide appeal is in the "ladylike role" department in contrast with the "bad girl" siren portrayals having such a mode among Hollywood heroines today. Charles Coburn, at 75 one of screen's most accomplished actors, takes over the next most important part in the film. Marie Windsor portrays a sexy role as Wayne's ex-wife. A warm, sentimental story of a two-fisted man whose wife has left him and his child, played by Sherry Jackson in the picture, he doesn't have much interest in making good until Donna Reed, in the person of a welfare officer, turns up to inquire about the little girl. Wayne then goes to work for Charles Coburn, and the ensuing incidents make for plenty of action in the John Wayne manner, winding up in a romance between the principals to gladden the hearts of the most sentimental of picture-going fans.
