Replying to the Montreal Herald, which asks it to stop criticising Tarte, Laurier & Co. and their methods, the Gleaner, of Huntingdon, Quebec, a strong Liberal newspaper, representing the feelings of honest, disappointed Liberals throughout the country, points out that for eighteen years it was charged that the Dominion suffered from extravagant administration and unjust discrimination. The Toronto Globe urged the Liberal press to advocate a change. "The change was effected on the basis of a contract between the leaders of the Liberal party and the electors who put them in power in 1896. The contract is to be found in the speeches of these leaders, in the motions of want of confidence they placed on the journals of the House, and in the platform adopted at the Ottawa convention. The chief of these pledges were, that if the electors would place the Liberals in office

1. They would give the country a revenue tariff.
2. Put an end to corruption.
3. Reduce the expenditure.
4. Stop the increase of the public debt.
5. Keep public lands for actual settlers.

There were other promises of less importance; these were the leading ones. If ever men went into office on the distinct understanding that they would adapt the tariff to suit the wage-earner and not the manufacturer, that they would put an end to the growth of the public debt, and stop the boodling, favouritism, and corruption which has sickened the electors, they were the Liberals of '96. The understanding was clear and distinct that a revolution in the management of the affairs of the country was to be made, that in place of extravagance we were to have thrift, in place of debt we were to have a paying-off of old scores, that for every dollar spent the country was to have full value, and the robbery of the public treasury, under whatever pretence, stopped with a firm hand. For four years a Liberal Government has been in office, backed by a powerful majority. Holding office for four years under most favourable conditions for carrying out reforms, with a surprising increase of revenue and an entire absence of irritating questions to divide the House, have the Ministers at Ottawa fulfilled the pledges on the strength of which the people placed them in power? Let facts answer. They were to keep down the public debt, they have increased it by eight million dollars; they declared the business of the country could be carried on with an expenditure of forty millions, they have increased it to over fifty millions; they promised to keep the public lands for the settler, they have voted over nine million acres to railway corporations; they were to protect the farmer against the extortions of the manufacturer for such elemental necessities of the farm as fence wire, nails, implements, and coal oil, the Canadian farmer is to-day paying more than these articles can be bought for in the United States. These are broad features in the management of the country about which there can be no mistake, and in each one we find the Laurier Administration has not only failed to fulfil its promises, but has done those things for which it condemned the Administration to which it succeeded. In the great lines of the management of our country's affairs there has been no change; there has been a change of men, but the Ministers who call themselves Liberals have been doing what the Conservatives did. It is in reality a question of good faith. There is not a Liberal who reads these lines who did not, in the election of 1896, seek to get votes by promising retrenchment and honest government. Can he look these men in the face and say the leaders whom he then trusted have done what he expected from them? Are there not tens of thousands of Liberals ashamed of the record of the past four years, and who recognize that the men at Ottawa have proved false? Had the Liberal press, at the very inception of the policy of extravagance, when the Crow's Nest Pass job was mooted, spoken out, would the excesses of the after-sessions have been committed? Ministers have been allowed to do as they pleased, unchecked by the outspoken criticism which would have kept them to their promises, and the result is to-day the reproaches that are being heaped on the Liberal name, and to which no sufficient reply can be made. Only those who believe that honesty in politics is poor policy will condemn the Gleaner for pursuing the course of admitting what is true and seeking to remedy what is wrong.

We differ with the Gleaner on one point. It says these "ministers who call themselves Liberals have been doing what the Conservatives did." The Conservatives certainly never spent so much as the new Liberals are spending; they never taxed so highly as Laurier does; and they were never guilty of such atrocious jobbery as that of to-day, and never will be. They were charged with many offences, and the people exercised a right which belonged to them when a change was decided on. But in the entire eighteen years of their administration there was no Crow's Nest swindle. The Gleaner, however, proceeds to comment on specific cases. The Herald, it says, declares Mr. Blair has made the Intercolonial a brilliant success. If that be true, why, in the closing days of the session, was the House asked to pour $1,350,000 more into that sink-hole? By juggling with ordinary expenditure and expenditure on capital account Mr. Blair made out a surplus on paper, but, in reality, there is a big deficit. Mr. Blair brought the Intercolonial into Montreal, the Herald cries, as if that were to his credit. What about the deal with Green-shields, agreeing to pay more than what the road had been offered for to Haggart, and the reduction in price when the Senate refused to pass the bill? Mr. Blair the Herald declares to be a strong man—his deeds certainly smell strong. The Herald shows nothing against Dr. Borden except his buying from a party follower, who is not in trade, ground biscuits at $2 a pound, and says that transaction did not injure his personal reputation. If Dr. Borden was clean personally, why did the Government make the motion condemning the transaction one of want of confidence?

If Dr. Borden was not to blame, why did the Government not lead in the move to have the guilty punished? The powdered biscuit, however, is only a trifling incident in the Minister of Militia's Record." He is answerable, among other things, for cultivating militarism, for "sending a body of troops to the Klondike at a cost of half a million dollars, where there was no more need of them than at Lake St. John, and his attempt to create a titled class by giving the Government power to appoint honorary colonels. The Herald affirms the time had not come when railway subsidies can be discontinued. Read over the list of railway subsidized by the present Government, and see how many are stub lines, doing what the owners of quarries and mines ought to do for themselves, how many are parallel lines, and how many are lines that can never be commercial successes and are subsidized to bribe constituencies. Take the instances at our doors. Eighty-four thousand eight hundred and forty-seven dollars voted to such poor men as Dr. Webb, Depew, and Vanderbilt to help them to extend the New York Central from Beauharnois to Caughnawaga, and the N. Y. C., in grateful acknowledgement, sells tickets on the U. S. section of its line at two cents a mile, and on the Canadian at three cents. The paying of that $84,847 was a job, and nobody knows that better than Mr. Blair. At the session of 1898 the House voted with reluctance $270,000 to the Grand Trunk towards defraying the cost of enlarging the Victoria bridge. That was bad enough, but it was not the end of it. The Government was afraid to ask at once all it wanted to give, and so it comes down this session with a demand for $230,000 more." "The Herald's pretention that the subsidies are not fifty but 3 per cent. loans is misleading. It knows the truth, that out of any service performed by these companies for the Government, such as carrying supplies or transport of volunteers, it may deduct a percentage. There is no provision to compel the companies to pay any interest on their subsidies in cash, and it is morally certain that not one in ten of them will pay more than a fraction of interest in the shape of services rendered. The Herald talks about the good results of the rule of its masters. Excepting the preferential tariff to Britain, we know of no good results. The country is paying 12 1-2 million dollars a year more in taxes than it ever paid before, the debt is growing, and corporations and trusts have extended their bounds and strengthened their clutch. If the country is prosperous it in spite of what the Government has done, it is prosperous because Providence has sent good crops and the prices for farm produce have risen in Europe. The true Liberal is not to be fooled by names or party cries." In conclusion, the Gleaner says it "will continue to be of the opinion that the Ottawa Ministers have been false to their promises and the principles they professed while in Opposition, and that the Liberals should, at least in its on Sir Wilfred reconstructing his Cabinet."

This startling arraignment is an unexpected reply to the appeal to the Huntingdon Gleaner to "shut up." It is a reply, however, which honest men of all parties will appreciate. Party leaders have no right to lay down a platform which they have no right to observe. When they have done this and have broken faith, and have introduced a regime of boodling, they have still less right to expect an intelligent electorate to endorse them.
