Whirlwind

by Norma Newcomb
CHAPTER FIVE
Part Three

"Well, are you pleased with yourself?" he shot out savagely. "You could have had a contract just like that, if you'd been smart. Why can't you be clever just once?"

"Maybe I should try to be." She turned, hands working nervously with the belt of her flaming housecoat. The patches which had been under her eyes were scarcely in evidence now. "If I was clever then you wouldn't have to be."

"Go on," he barked.

"Bill, I know what you were thinking back there when Mr. Wyndham said I should really become a woman who leads men to destruction. Maybe I ain't clever, but my eyes are good."

"Well, why shouldn't we use Jimmy?" he countered. "I'd say he is perfect. I always like to get back at those dashing wolves, anyway."

"He got suspended because of us, remember?"

"Because he had the nerve to get fresh with you. Don't forget that, Drona. We wouldn't even know him had he not got fresh. Well, let him take what's coming to him."

"Mind, I'm not saying that he hasn't a lot coming to him. The way he's treating Sally — yeah, and that Helen dame. Only I don't want to be the gal who gives it to him, Bill."

"Holy smoke, don't tell me you have fallen for him!"

"Nuts, chum, I don't fall for no man. But I'm not a heel, see?"

"You want to be a star, don't you?"

"Sure, but why amash a guy's career? There must be other ways."

"Then I walk out. Fast." He became excited. "Didn't I tell you that this guy would put you back on the East Side? Maybe you haven't fallen for him, but you certainly give a darn good imitation of a girl in love."

"You mean you'd leave me flat?"

It was apparent that just the thought of his doing that was tormenting her. "You generally have your way."

"And because I do you're practically on top."

"Oh, all right . . ."

Bill smiled and went back to the living room. Jimmy seated at the concert piano, was playing lightly, a faraway expression on his face. He looked up as Bill took a chair, and nodded.

"Fireworks over?"

"No fireworks, Kennedy. Drona and I get along remarkably well."

"A nice kid, Drona, even if she did bust me on the head."

"Utter nonsense!" his grandfather had flared when Philip had finally got the courage to tell him. "It is buck fever, nothing more. All men become frightened before they marry. But you'll get over it."

"I don't love her, Grandfather."

"Nonsense. Catherine is a fine girl. Sweet, kind, considerate, beautiful."

"So is Sally Allison."

"A servant's daughter."

"The servant is a good one. Isn't that something in her favour?" To be continued

DONAGE W.L.

The February meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Vincent Trainor on Feb. 5th with eleven members present. The President presided and the meeting opened by repeating the creed in unison.

After the roll call, the minutes of the last meeting were read and approved and the School and Sick Committees gave their reports. The sick committee reported that fruit had been taken to Miss Mary Heron and the bill was presented and paid. A card of thanks was read from Mrs. Eugene Trainor thanking the Institute for fruit sent to her while she was sick.

It was moved and seconded that three dollars be sent to the "March of Dimes". Miss FitzPatrick will ask children to send in their donations.

During the social hour which followed the business period, a delicious lunch was served by the hostesses assisted by her daughter, Joyce, and Miss Josephine FitzPatrick.
