CHAPTER TWO Part Two

"Silly Helen, I was just talking to hear myself talk."
"That's better."
Restless, Sally rolled over onto her back and stared at the piece of moon visible through the curtained window in the wall opposite Philip, Philip Jethrup. No longer a kid to be teased at games and such, but an important man, a handsome man, a rich man who was unhappy and liked her. Of course, Grandfather Jethrup would be serious opposition, but her mother was right in one respect. Ultimately, the decision would be Philip's to make. A little work on him, a little sympathy when he required it, a little encouragement, a few words of flattery—she could do it, as easily as she snapped her fingers. Wasn't she pretty enough to attract Jimmy Kennedy?

Mike, of course, spotted them the instant they made their appearance on the brick terrace of the cafeteria. He sprang up and leaned very deeply first to Miss Whoops, then to Sally. His eyes lingered on her as he helped her into seats.

"I know, Mike, blue is my best color. But I wouldn't have worn this dress if I hadn't been brow-beaten into doing so."

"Miss Whoops, the lunch is on me."

"Lunch?" Miss Whoops rose from the table with a twinkling light in her face mischievously. "But I've already eaten, Captain White, and I have considerably shopping to do. Please excuse me, Sally, I'll see you again."

Before the girl could stop marveling, the old nurse was tripping briskly away.

"Mike, you put her up to it!" He laughed, waving his hand in a gesture of denial. "I did no such thing, Sally. I was surprised when I saw you."

"She thinks we ought to fall in love with one another. You know, I'm slowly but surely getting angrier. Mother, and now Miss Whoops. What's wrong with being a bachelor girl?"

"Nothing." He picked up the menu and handed it to her as a parakeet sounded raucously. "I suppose you know, though, that Jimmy intends to do something about correcting your present state? He bragged that he was taking you out this evening."

"That was Helen. Sometimes people can become a pain in the neck, Mike."

"Including the skipper?" She studied him and smiled. "Of course not. You're one of my favorite people. Quiet, gentle, considerate, courteous. I'll pay for my own lunch, though. There's a limit to courtesy."

"Yet who can tell? Perhaps under this exterior is a man you don't know. A passionate, brutal man who's been biding his time. Maybe I'm smart enough to know that you're not ready for romance—yet. Maybe this big brother business is just a clever act."

"Jimmy should take lessons from you, then. He might do better in the long run."

"I never knew that Jimmy wasn't doing all right."

"You heard him yesterday," she said with satisfaction. "So he wins this evening."

"Does he?" she asked, all mischief.

"You mean you're going to turn him down again?"

"You bet I am. If there's anything I dislike, it's wolves."

A little declaration which would have surprised Jimmy Kennedy very much had he heard it, because that evening dislike very definitely was not in the kiss she gave him at the door.

7 Persons Injured In Two Car Crash

ST. MARTIN, Que., Feb. 18—(CP)—Seven persons were injured, one of them seriously, when two cars collided Sunday near this community northwest of Montreal.

Most seriously injured are Madeleine David, St. Martin, with a fractured leg, a large gash on the head and other cuts.

Gils David, 50, her father, Mrs. David, her mother, also 50, and two other members of the family, Pauline, 18, and Philip, 15, also were taken to hospital suffering lesser injuries.

Occupants of the other car were Ann Griffith 22, and Ian Brown, 25, both of Montreal. Miss Griffith, who was driving the car, was taken to hospital suffering a possible fractured leg and Brown suffered a fractured jaw. Both cars were wrecked.

Police said the collision occurred when Miss Griffith pulled over on the highway to pass another vehicle.

Quebec Drama Festival Concludes

QUEBEC, Feb. 18—(CP)—"La Plus Forte" (She Is Strongest) was adjudicated the best production and Pierrette Fortin, playing a minor role in the two-part comedy, was chosen the best actress in the Eastern Quebec Regional Drama Festival.

Adjudicator Pierre Lefevre made the selections Saturday night after Les Compagnons Notre-Dame of Three Rivers staged "Le Combat Des Elus" (The Battle Of The Appointed), last presentation in the three-day trials preliminary to the Dominion Festival at Saint John, N.B., April 26-May 3.

Mr. Lefevre selected Hal Walkley as the best actor and "The Playbook of the Western World," in which Walkley held the title role, as the play with the best scenery.

The New York-born Frenchman said "La Plus Forte," written by Alme Flamond and Rene Arthur of Quebec, was chosen for the overall interpretation by the cast. In her role, Miss Fortin showed "precision, strength and perfect tone."

Mary Garden's Zest For Life Undimmed At 75

ABERDEEN, Scotland, Feb. 17—(AP)—Mary Garden approaches her 75th birthday with the same zest for life that sparked her operatic career.

The Scottish-born "singing actress" whose voice thrilled North Americans and Europeans in the first three decades of this century keeps her horizons wide.

She'll be 75 Feb. 20. The day probably will be spent quietly behind the granite walls of her comfortable apartment on Aberdeen's Rosemount Hill. There'll be few callers, most certainly no celebration, but this doesn't add up to the life of a recluse.

Among her plans for this year are a trip to Paris to see about French publication rights for her autobiography; another speaking tour of the United States—her fourth in as many years—and a pilgrimage to Southern France to help an old friend promote a new opera training mecca.

A few weeks ago she slipped on Aberdeen's ice-covered cobbles while shopping and wrenched her leg. She was ordered to bed.

"I've got the bandages off," she confided to a friend who called, but "of course I will rest it."

But she interrupted the "rest" that same week to travel to London to make a requested broadcast for the BBC.

On the whole, however, the one-time favorite of the Paris Opera Comique, the New York Metropolitan and the Chicago Grand Opera Company leads a disciplined and orderly existence.

Warm Hearth
Outside her apartment are cold granite walls and colder northern skies, but inside there is warmth.

In her favorite salon deep carpets are overlaid with a magnificent leopard skin rug. The motif is red (she favors this color and her ensemble always has a touch of it)—red silk coverings over period furniture, antique pieces from France and a brooding bust of Napoleon.

Each place has the aura of "belonging." Each has a direct link in the life of the prima donna. The room is an invitation to rest and talk of the opera and its people. It's as warm as the greeting of Mary Garden.

She will venture no opinions on world vice and virtues. Political talk is taboo.

She is looking forward to September and her trip to the U.S.—"this time for five months." She is delighted at the prospect of spending one whole month on the west coast.

"California," she sighs. "So warm, so lovely—I just adore warmth." Then she'll come back to her beloved Aberdeen and the treasures of her salon, for as she once said proudly: "So I live, and will die—a Scot."

IN MEMORIAM
The funeral which was largely attended, was held from the home; the service being conducted by her pastor, Reverend M. Waterworth of the Christian Church of Bradalbane, assisted by Reverend W. B. MacPhail of the United Church.

"When I Survey the Wondrous Cross" was sung by Mr. J. B. Lewis and the choir sang "Safe In The Arms of Jesus" and "Abide With Me." There were many beautiful flowers given in memoriam.

The pallbearers were Messrs. Hedley Woodside, Ira MacKay, George Dixon, Andrew Stevenson, Alex MacDonald and Robert

Howard, The interment was held at the family plot in Fredericton.

She was a friend to everyone who came.

Within the circle of her busy days; So many are there now who speak her name

And tell of kindness, in so many ways.

She gave herself so generously to all,

And never failed to answer friendship's call.

Her heart was great enough to open wide

To those in need of consolation's balm;

No one who sought her help was ever denied.

Her courage helped the fearful soul find calm;

Now she has left us for a Better Land,

Her greatness we begin to understand.

New Post For Pearson Rumored

OTTAWA, Feb. 16—(CP)—New speculation is playing an old tune about Canada's External Affairs Minister Pearson.

He is reported going to an international post. The reports are no likelier to prove true than have their numerous predecessors, which included one half-serious suggestion that he would become czar of baseball.

This time he is reported mentioned prominently in European capitals as the outstanding possibility for the full-time job of director or secretary-general of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization under a revamped setup.

He's not likely to take the job even if it is offered to him. He's needed in the Canadian cabinet.

So far, in fact, no word has come back here to the cabinet or the External Affairs department from Mr. Pearson in London to indicate that any discussions are going on about the job.

One strong indication that he won't take it is that he at last is really ready to run for one of the other international jobs for which he's been mentioned.

Canada has informed other members of the United Nations that Mr. Pearson is willing to run for Presidency of the U. N. General Assembly at the session slated to start next September.

This was reported from Paris several weeks ago and is confirmed by Mr. Pearson's office here. The information was passed along to other countries at a time when it was known the N. A. T. O. job was coming up.

In the U. N. job, he would be in New York for a few months but would be able to commute to Ottawa fairly often. He would continue as External Affairs minister.

In the new N. A. T. O. job, he would become an international figure somewhat like Trygve Lie, Norwegian Secretary-General of the U. N. Mr. Lie's job is another Mr. Pearson has been prominently mentioned for in the past.

The Atlantic Pact powers are still puzzling over just what to make of the new job. Some people say it can't be defined until a man is found to fill it. Others say a man can't be found until something concrete can be offered him.

The general idea, however, is that he would direct the day-to-day operations of N. A. T. O. in close contact with a permanent, over-all council on which each member country would have a representative.

The whole question of the new set-up is due for discussion at the Lisbon meeting of the existing council, starting a week from yesterday.

Mr. Pearson and Defence Minister Claxton will represent Canada at Lisbon. Mr. Claxton and a party of officials left yesterday by air to attend.

Marrige Yesterday Of Gracie Fields

ISLE OF CAPRI, Feb. 18—(AP)—Shy and nervous, Gracie Fields was married on this romantic isle today to the man who came to fix her radio and stayed to win her heart.

The 34-year-old British stage and screen star appeared flushed as Boris Alperovici slipped the wedding ring on her hand and became her third husband. It was the first marriage for the 48-year-old Boris.

Her hand trembled visibly as she, in turn, placed a wedding band on the finger of the blonde, blue-eyed groom.

The 15-minute ceremony took place before the high altar of St. Stephen's Roman Catholic Cathedral.

Gracie was dressed in her favorite color—purple. Boris wore a grey suit.

There were no flowers in the church because the couple had arrived unexpectedly from Rome earlier today.

The people of Capri thronged the church in a festive mood. Later they threw confetti at the couple and cheered lustily.

As the pair got into their jeep, a monk from the Carthusian Monastery rushed to Gracie and perfumed her with a bottle of perfume he had distilled from the wild flowers of the island.

The British actress and Alperovici moved on to a private reception at Miss Fields' beautiful villa, "Casona de Mare" (Songs of the Sea) which she built in 1916 with her second husband, the late Monty Banks, Italian-born actor.

The reception was a simple one, with only a handful of close friends present. Gracie has decided to distribute to Capri's poor the money a fancy wedding reception would have cost.

The couple had gone to Rome last Thursday amid reports of a rift in the romance but Gracie explained to reporters today she made the trip "to do a little shopping."

Brotherhood Through Education

The idea that education is bad for the masses has almost disappeared. The Bahai teachings would make the education of every child an obligation of the parents or of the Government. This applies to boys and girls alike. Education will be directed to the goal that children will grow up in full awareness of the oneness and brotherhood of mankind and the common source of revealed religion.

They will recognize the destructive effects of prejudice and superstition and be trained to sympathetic acceptance of divergent racial and religious groups. Taught an international language and a universal outlook such a generation of children would fit into place as citizens of the world as well as of their own country. In a word, they have been taught Brotherhood through education. In the future a world wide system of education must be developed as one of the functions of a peaceful world.

"When you figure how much cheaper it is to eat at home, can't you count my time worth a few pennies?"

The problem was PAIN

The answer is DISPRIN

For 30 years we have used little white tablets—acetylsalicylic acid—for relief of pain. Today this familiar pain-killer is available in a new form without the disadvantages of acidity, insolubility and bitter-taste. It is called DISPRIN and is sold at druggists everywhere.

DISPRIN is soluble and substantially neutral. When taken in water as recommended, it enters the stomach as a true solution and not as undissolved particles. It is therefore less liable to cause stomach discomfort.

DISPRIN is readily absorbed. Because it definitely dissolves (not merely disintegrates) DISPRIN permits speedy absorption and gives quicker relief.

DISPRIN is palatable. Even children will take it readily.
