Peace Observation Corps Suggested By U.S. Experts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United Nations needs a professional peace observation corps to help in patrolling the world's trouble spots, a group of foreign affairs experts has told the U.S. disarmament agency. They estimated the initial cost of organizing and operating a group of 267 officers for the first year at $9,131,000. The estimate is given in a 648-page study, financed by the disarmament agency and released by the Washington centre of foreign policy research. The centre, which organized the study, is part of the school of advanced international studies of Johns Hopkins University. The research and reporting project was directed by David W. Co-op Views Are Given.

REGINA (CP)—The Co-operative Union of Canada has approved a statement encompassing 24 separate social and public issues. The statement covers everything from rural and urban development to disarmament. In the social and economic field the statement recognized the changes taking place in the rural areas of Canada, involving a decline of farm population. The statement said special attention must be given to the social and economic problems of farmers and fishermen who are classified as "small or marginal producers."

"We strongly recommend governments, in extending credit and other forms of assistance to rural people, give special consideration to operating through co-operative organizations," the statement read. Health and medical care and housing were both included in the social and economic segment.

"We support the objective of universal medical and hospital insurance for all Canadians and we support the organization of consumer-controlled community clinics and co-operative health services. The statement urged federal, municipal and provincial governments to undertake greatly expanded programs of public housing with the co-operative movement assuming responsibility for initiating and promoting co-operative and non-profit forms of housing, soliciting government assistance and financial support whenever feasible.
