New Film Tells Probation's Role In War On Crime

Crime and punishment, innocence and vindication are the twin themes of "Girls on Probation," a melodramatically exciting film produced by Warner Bros. with Jane Bryan and Ronald Reagan in the leading roles, which opened yesterday at the Capitol Theatre.

As the title indicates, the picture gives a sympathetic exposition of the workings of the system of probation, which has come to be an important factor in the modern concept of penology.

Ordinarily the benefit of probation system are extended to first offenders who... guilty of the crimes of which they have been convicted, for the purpose of preventing them from becoming hardened criminals because of one misstep.

In the situation pictured in "Girls on Probation" the social value of the system is even more strikingly presented, for the heroine of the picture is actually innocent of the crime of which she is convicted, and it is only probation which saves her from a long prison term and the possibility of her becoming a bitterly anti-social, if not downright criminal, member of society.

In addition to Miss Bryan and Reagan, the cast also includes, in important roles, Anthony Averill, Sheila Bromley, Henry O'Neill, Elizabeth Risdon, Sig Rumann, Dorothy Peterson, Esther Dale and Susan Hayward.

Borah Opens Senate Fight On Neutrality

WASHINGTON, July 9 — Senator Borah (Rep-Idaho) fired the opening shot of a momentous Senate fight over neutrality today with a bluntly phrased warning that the United States Congress should disregard the reactions of the "democracies" and "dictatorships" of Europe in considering revision of the law.

Asserting there was little to choose between the foreign policies of the totalitarian and democratic nations, Borah urged that the traditional American policy of neutrality be maintained. He has opposed administration efforts to repeal the arms embargo of the present Neutrality Law.

"Our policy is an American policy," Borah said, reading from a prepared statement to a hustling Senate "It should be maintained for the interests of no foreign nation, for or in favor of no foreign government, but for the best interests of the American people and against all of the isms and schemes which would seek to destroy it."

Once upon a time...

Mrs. Brown paid 15c for a cake of Palmolive Soap

THAT was almost 40 years ago. In those days Palmolive was a new and almost unknown product. The demand for Palmolive was small, so Palmolive could be manufactured only in small quantities... the most expensive way. This meant that the costly imported Olive and Palm Oils, used in making Palmolive, could be bought only in small quantities... the most expensive way. Because the price was high, and the demand small, retailers bought Palmolive only in small quantities... the most expensive way.

Gradually more and more of these newspaper readers tried and liked Palmolive. And, with their increasing purchases, up went the sales, down went manufacturing costs. Wisely, Palmolive's makers passed this saving on to their customers.

Soon Mrs. Brown was buying Palmolive for only 10c a cake. At this new low price Palmolive was advertised to a new and wider market. Thousands who had read about Palmolive, but had been unable to afford to pay the 15c price, now gladly bought it at the new 10c price. All through Palmolive's history, this story of increased demand and resulting lower prices, has constantly been repeated. First at 15c, then at 10c, at 2 cakes for 15c, and now at 2 cakes for 11c, Palmolive has been advertised to ever-widening markets.

Today, Palmolive, the luxury soap of 40 years ago, is the largest selling toilet soap in 72 countries of the world. And today, Mrs. Brown buys the new improved Palmolive for little more than one-third of the 15c she paid for her first cake.

So they advertised Palmolive in the newspapers. Day after day, week after week, hundreds and thousands of people read about the new, gentle toilet soap made with skin softening, soothing Olive and Palm Oils.

One of a series of announcements featuring specific examples of the power of newspaper advertising to build business. This advertisement was prepared by Lord & Thomas of Canada, Limited.

PALM OIL

PALMOLIVE

More than 3,000 years ago, slaves blended the tropical tree oils of Olive and Palm. This costly mixture, crude though it was, played a most important part in the toilet of beautiful women. They knew it soothed their skin, kept it soft, clean... smooth and lovely.

For 3,000 years nothing has been discovered that is finer, gentler, more soothing for your skin than these wonderful oils of the Orient. And today, with the most careful scientific methods, these same precious natural oils are blended into Palmolive Soap. Palmolive's purity; its safe, penetrating lather; and its natural, delicate coloring, are due only to the secret blending of these two age-old beauty aids.

So, knowing what Palmolive is made with, you can use it safely, without fear, for your own delicate skin. Truly, Palmolive will keep in your complexion that soft, lovely youthfulness. In 72 countries of the world, more women use Palmolive than any other toilet soap.

"I'm thrilled with the New Improved Palmolive" says MRS. C. BEARSTO, lovely Winnipeg resident.

"Of course I'd used Palmolive before, but not regularly. From now on, Palmolive is the only soap for my skin. It's so much milder. My daily beauty treatment with the new improved Palmolive is really a thrill, especially since the new perfume is so lovely. I've noticed too, that the new Palmolive is harder. So it's thrifty to use."

Now Improved.
