ELECTRIC GLOSS
FOR cleaning Solid Silver, Nickel, Brass, Copper and Plate Glass. Quick! Sure!
Permanent! No dirt, no trouble, no labor.
Being entirely free from grit and acids, it cannot injure the most finely burnished surface. It is the only preparation ever produced that will polish brass or copper without the use of acid. Nothing approaches it for removing grease and finger marks from Brass, Copper, Glass, etc.; while for cleaning Nickel or Stoves it is especially useful.
Retail price, 25 cents per bottle.

MICA WASH.—This wash is the only thing of the kind ever invented. A stove may be as handsome as a jewel and shine like ebony; but smoked mica lights will spoil it all. Day by day mica becomes scarcer and higher in price, and an article that will clean and preserve it is valuable to all concerned.
Try this wash once, and you will always use it. Retail price, 25 cents per bottle.
The above household necessities are manufactured by The Electric Glass Co., Philadelphia U. S. A., and sold by every respectable Drug gist, Stove Dealer, Hardware Merchant and General Dealer in Canada. The Canadian

CHAPTER XV.

The boys were out of hand now, but Totty was still a day-long plague, worse than either of the others had been, because there was more fuss made about her. And there was no end to the making and mending of clothes. Hetty would have been glad to hear that she should never see a child again; they were worse than the nasty little lambs that the shepherd was always bringing in to be taken special care of in lambing time, for the lambs were got rid of sooner or later. As for the young chickens and turkeys, Hetty would have hated the very word "hatching" if her aunt had not bribed her to attend to the young poultry by promising her the proceeds of one out of every brood. The round downy chicks peeping out from under their mother's wing never touched Hetty with any pleasure; that was not the sort of prettiness she cared about; but she did care about the prettiness of the things she would buy for herself at Treddleston fair with the money they fetched. And yet she looked so dimpled, so charming, as she stooped down to put the soaked bread under the hen-coop, that you must have been a very acute personage indeed to suspect her of that hardness. Molly, the housemaid, with a turn up nose and a protuberant jaw, was really a tender-hearted girl, and, as Mrs.
Poyser said, a jewel to look after the poultry; but her stolid face showed nothing of this maternal delight any more than a brown earthenware pitcher will show the light of the lamp within it.

It is generally a feminine eye that first detects the moral deficiencies hidden under the 'dear deceit' of beauty; so it is not surprising that Mrs. Poyser, with her keenness and abundant opportunity for observation, should have formed a tolerably fair estimate of what might be expected from Hetty in the way of feeling, and in moments of indignation she had sometimes spoken with great openness on the subject to her husband.

'She's no better than a peacock, as 'nd strut about on the wall and spread it tail when the sun shone if all the folks in the parish was a-ying; there's nothing seems to give her a turn in 't inside, not even when we thought Totty had tumbled into the pit. To think o' that dear Chub!' And we found her wi' her little shoes stuck i' the mud an' crying fit to break her heart by the far horse-pit. Hetty never minded it, I could see, though she's been at the mussin' o' the child ever since it was a babby. It's my belief her heart's as hard as a pibble.'

'Nay, nay,' said Mr. Poyser, 'them mustn't judge Hetty too hard. They young girls are like th' unripe grain—they'll make good meal by-and-by, but they're squashy yet. There's see, Hetty'll be all right when she's got a good husband an' children of her own.'

'I don't want to be hard upo' the gell.
She's got clever fingers of her own, and can be useful enough when she likes, and I should miss her wi' the butter, for she's got a cool hand. An' let be what may, I strive to do my part by a niece o' yours, an' that I've done; for I've taught her everything as belongs to a house, an' I've told her her duty often enough, though, God knows, I've no breath to spare, an' that catchin' pain comes on the house, I'd need to have twice the strength to keep 'em up to their work. I's like having roast meat at three fires; as soon as you've basted one, another's burnin'.'

Hetty stood sufficiently in awe of her aunt to be anxious to conceal from her so much of her vanity as could be hidden without too great a sacrifice. She could not resist spending her money in bits of finery which Mrs. Poyser disapproved; but she would have been ready to die with shame, vexation, and fright, if her aunt had this moment opened the door, and seen her with her bits of candle lighted, and strutting about decked in her scarf and earrings. To prevent such a surprise, she always bolted her door, and she had not forgotten to do so to-night. It was well; for there now came a light tap, and Hetty, with a leaping heart, rushed to blow out the candles and throw them into the drawer.
She dare not stay to take out her earrings, but she threw off her scarf and let it fall on the floor before the light tap came again.
We shall know how it was that the light tap came, if we leave Hetty for a short time and return to Dinah at the moment when she had delivered Totty to her mother's arms, and was come up stairs to her bedroom adjoining Hetty's.

Dinah delighted in her bed-room window.
Being on the second story of that tall house, it gave her a wide view over the fields. The thickness of the wall formed a broad step about a yard below the window, where she could perch her chair. And now the first thing she did on entering her room was to seat herself in this chair, and look out on the peaceful fields, beyond which the large moon was rising just above the hedgerow line. She lik'd the pasture best where the milch cows were lying, and next to that the meadow where the grass was half mown, and lay in silvered sweeping lines. Her heart was very full, for there was to be only one more night on which she would look out on those fields for a long time to come; but she thought little of leaving the mere scene, for to her bleak Snowfield had just as many charms; she thought of all the dear people whom she had learned to care for among these peaceful fields, and who would now have a place in her loving remembrance forever. She thought of the struggles and the weariness that might lie before them in the rest of their life's journey, when she should be away from them; and the pressure of this thought soon became too strong for her to enjoy the unresponding stillness of the moonlit fields.

She closed her eyes, that she might feel more intensely the presence of a love and sympathy deeper and more tender than was bathed from the earth and sky. That was often Dinah's mode of praying in solitude. Simply to close her eyes and to feel herself inclosed by the Divine Presence; then gradually her fears, her yearning anxieties for others, melted away like ice-crystals in a warm ocean. She had sat in this way perfectly still, with her hands crossed on her lap, and the pale light resting on her calm face, for at least ten minutes, when she was startled by a loud sound, apparently of something falling in Hetty's room; but, like all sounds that fall on our ears in a state of abstraction it had no distinct character, but was simply loud and startling, so that she felt uncertain whether she had interpreted it rightly. She rose and listened, but all was quiet afterward; and she reflected that Hetty might merely have knocked something down in getting into bed. She began slowly to undress; but now owing to the suggestions of this sound, her thoughts became concentrated on Hetty; that sweet young thing, with life and all its trials before her—the solemn daily duties of the wife and mother—and her mind so unprepared for them all; bent merely on little, foolish, selfish pleasure, like a child hugging its toys in the beginning of a long, solitary journey, in which it will have to bear hunger, and cold, and unsheltered darkness. Dinah felt a double care for Hetty, because she shared Seth's anxious interest in his brother's lot, and she had not come to the conclusion that Hetty did not love Adam well enough to marry him.

She saw too clearly the absence of any warm, self-devoting love in Hetty's nature to regard the coldness of her behavior toward Adam as any indication that he was not the man she would like to have for a husband. And this blank in Hetty's nature, instead of exciting Dinah's dislike, only touched her with a deeper pity; the lovely face and form affected her as always affects a pure and tender mind free from selfish jealousies; it was an excellent divine gift, that gave a deeper pathos to the need, the sin, the sorrow with which it was mingled, as the canker in a lily-white bud is more grievous to behold than in a common pot-herb.

Opinions of the People.

ADJOURNED MEETING AT STANLEY, NEW LONDON.

A very large body of the electors of Queen's County, on the north side of the Island, assembled at Stanley Hall on the 29th ult. The chairman, Walter Simpson, Esq., took the chair, and called upon Dr.
McNeill to read the resolutions which were passed at the last meeting, and after a good deal of discussion they were unanimously endorsed by the meeting upon a reconsideration of the railway resolution and winter communication. The following are the resolutions clear of the railway one which you published already:

Resolved, That our representatives do urge upon the Government the fulfilment of the terms, and obtain ample justice for this Province, and until more effectual means are used, that they insist on spending annually in this Province, up'n branch railways a sum commensurate with the loss sustained by this province in addition to the regular legitimate expenditures on public works, until such time as the terms of Union are actually fulfilled.

Carried unanimously. It was moved, seconded, and unanimously carried.
Whereas, A Money Order Office would be a great convenience to the people of New London Gavenshill, Hope River and Grenville, and whereas the establishment of such an office does not involve a money outlay, be it therefore

Resolved, That our representatives do urge upon the Post Office authorities the necessity of establishing such an office without delay, as the business of this part of the country require such accommodation.

Resolved, That, whereas the breakwater at New London is damaged and being undermined by the storms and heavy sea, and whereas it is desirable that the unfinished dam at Campbellton Island should be completed without delay.

Resolved, That our representatives do urge upon the Minister of Public Works the immediate necessity of repairing the damage done to the old work, and completing the said dam to the channel as soon as possible.

It was moved, seconded and carried unanimously
That Whereas, The lights and harbor business relative to the buoys and the keeping of lights are subject to great dissipation, be it therefore

Resolved, That our representatives be instructed to obtain an investigation of the same, and order the removal of all grievances and irregularities relative thereto It was moved by John O. Clark, Esq., seconded by Dr. McNeill, and carried unanimously:
Whereas, Prince Edward Island had a Minister in the cabinet under both the Reform and Liberal-Conservative Administrations until Mr. Pope was laid aside by affliction; And Whereas, This Island has now as good a right to a Cabinet Minister as it ever had; Therefore Resolved, That our representatives press upon the attention of the Cabinet our views on the question of the propriety and right of P. E. Island having a representative in the Cabinet, or know the reason why.
A letter was read from Mr. Davies explaining the reason of his absence.
Dr. Jenkins, M. P., being present by invitation, the resolutions were passed in
