AUGUST 19, 1884.

THE BATTLE

This is the hour for action. By this time most of the votes of strong partisans will have been polled. Now, let the friends of the Government see to it that every stray vote is obtained for the Liberal-Conservative Candidate. Let not a single vote be lost, through carelessness or neglect.

The Bank of P. E. Island.

Notice is given in the Canada Gazette that as two years have elapsed since the date of the winding up order, all creditors holding notes of the bank are required to file their claims in liquidation in respect thereof, otherwise the amount reserved to pay dividends on such notes now actually outstanding, will form part of such last or final dividend as may hereafter be declared and be distributed among the creditors of the bank whose claims have been duly filed and allowed.

Mr. Thomas White, M. P.

The report that Mr. Thomas White, M. P., for Cardwell, is soon to enter the Cabinet is the sufficient cause of his villification by the most rabid of the Grit Press, led on by the Toronto Globe. The more moderate of the Opposition papers are, however, candid enough to bear testimony to Mr. White's great ability and worth as a man and a politician. Thus the Winnipeg Sun, an Opposition journal says:—

"If it be true that Mr. Thomas White, the member for Cardwell, is to succeed Sir Leonard as Finance Minister, the country may congratulate itself. Mr. White is a man of great ability, who for many years has made trade and finance a study. The Dominion Board of Trade has had the benefit of his experienced services; indeed, there is no man in the country who has a more intelligent idea of its capabilities and requirements. The fact that he is a journalist tells for nothing against him. Sir Francis Hincks was a journalist; Sir John Ross was a lawyer; Sir Leonard kept a drug store; Sir Richard was president of the old Commercial Bank, which gave up the ghost under his management.

This tribute is, we need hardly say, well deserved. There are thousands in Canada who would rejoice to see Mr. White in the Cabinet, and who wonder why he is not there already. The report that he is soon to succeed Sir Leonard Tilley, originated with the Toronto Globe, and is, consequently, erroneous.

King's County Rifle Association.

The annual prize meeting of the King's County Rifle Association came off at the Rifle Range, Georgetown, on Saturday last. The weather was unfavorable for good shooting, there being a strong, unsteady wind blowing across the range. Still some fair shooting was made. During the afternoon, the President of the Association—Hon. Daniel Gordon—visited the Range, and watched the shooting with much interest. On the Secretary's announcing that he (the President) offered two valuable prizes for the two highest aggregate scores at the two matches, the members showed their gratitude by giving him three ringing cheers. Mr. Gordon afterwards addressed the men, complimenting them on the skill displayed with the rifle, and commending them for their efforts in keeping up the military reputation of the country. He referred particularly to the pains taken by Capt. Owen and his officers, in having mustered a full company for camp in Hunter River in July, and was pleased to hear that the men acquitted themselves creditably.

Pte. B. Johnson and Corpl. G. Gillis were the fortunate winners of the highest aggregate prizes—first and second respectively:

THE FIRE LAST NIGHT.

The Lord Property Consumed.

RANKIN HOUSE IMPERILLED.

Over $9,000 Worth of Property Destroyed.

A destructive fire took place at the head of Lord's Wharf last night. Seven warehouses were destroyed, and property to the value of $8,000 was consumed.

At half-past ten o'clock faint cries of "fire" were heard in rear of the Rankin. Instantly a blaze was seen bursting from the second story of a warehouse on Lord's Wharf, owned by Mr. Lord and occupied by Mr. George Coombs. The flames spread rapidly before the alarm was given, took possession of the building in which the fire originated, and fanned by a fresh north-east breeze, threatened the surrounding warehouses and the Rankin House.

Those who arrived first on the scene saw it was impossible to save the property from destruction. They therefore opened the Rankin House and other stables, let out the live stock and removed all goods and chattels convenient. But the flames increased alarmingly, and the smoke became so dense that it was impossible to remain close to the burning buildings. Those at work were, therefore compelled to desist, and await the arrival of the fire brigade, which was soon to the front and in operation.

The fire spread from the warehouse occupied by Mr. Coombs to the coal shed occupied by Capt. John Hughes, and thence to the large three story warehouse owned by Mr. Lord, and occupied by various parties. In twenty minutes after the alarm was given, the range of buildings in the west side of the wharf were burning fiercely and brilliantly. The fire in them was beyond control. All to be done, therefore, was save the Rankin and the range of warehouses, and stables, on the east side of the wharf. The latter task was a hopeless one; but it was partialy accomplished. The violent flames from the large warehouse in the west side soon caught and enveloped the small warehouses on the east. But the Fire Brigade, under Chief Engineer Large, did gallant work, contesting every inch and succeeding at length in extinguishing the flames at a critical point—the Rankin House stables.

The fire had not been more than an hour in progress before tha ranges of warehouses on both sides of the wharf were in ruin. The wind, which blew fresh from the north-east, was fortunate for the Rankin House. The flames and heat were carried from it, and it was apparent from the beginning that, although constantly threatened, it would not be destroyed. However, a water closet which stood close to the building in which the fire originated, caught fire. The flames crept along the roof of the walk leading from the closet to the house, and threatened the large wooden structure. The situation for a time was serious. The furniture of the Rankin was energetically removed, and the guests who did not leave bag and baggage at the outbreak of the fire now evacuated the premises. But the fire brigade made a praiseworthy effort to save the building. They, with great difficulty, pulled down the walk and thus separated the Rankin from the burning debris. This ended further cause for alarm, and in a short time the fire was extinguished.

The buildings destroyed were a warehouse, including weigh scales, in dimentions 120 feet long by 28 feet broad, two storys high, occupied by Mr. George Coombs; a coal shed, 50x28 two stories high, occupied by Capt. John Hughes, a three-story warehouse, 80x28 feet, occupied various parties; and a range of buildings used as warehouses and work-shop about 250 feet long, and two storys high. The Rankin House stable was also gutted. The value of buildings on the wharf, is estimated at over $8,000.

The Lord property was not insured, but the Rankin House furnitnre was insured for $6,000. Mr. Davies' loss, for breakage of furniture, suspension of business, etc., is estimated at over $1,200.

A quantity of lumber owned by Messrs. Barratt & Williams was consumed, the value of which we have not ascertained.

Mr. H. Haszard had a large quantity of herring in store in one of the warehouses which was destroyed, and Captain John Hughes lost a large quantity of coal by the fire.

The property in the different warehouses on the wharf was not insured, and will entail a loss on the owners.

The oil stored by Mr. A. Lord in one of the warehouses for the Marine Department —150 barrels—was destroyed.

Crops in Ontario.

According to the report of the Bureau of Industry for the month of August just issued, a good harvest of the grain crops in Ontario is assured. Fall wheat gives an average yield of 21⅓ bushels, and spring wheat 18⅓ bushels per acre, the average of both being twenty bushels. The aggregate production exceeds that of last year's harvest by 10,360,000 bushels. Barley was a good crop in the southern and southwestern counties, but in the northern and notheastern was effected by summer drought. The grain, though plump and heavy, was discoloured by rain showers in the last week of July. The oat crop accounts are much the same as for barley, but being two or three weeks later in ripening it, it has been greatly benefited by the July rains. The area in rye is much less than last year; the average yield is about the same. Pease show a beautiful crop. The estimated yield of the hay crop is a million tons less than last year. The appearance of the corn crop is not promising, due partly to inferior seed and partly to low temperature in June and July. Good crops of beans are expected. Reports of root crops are favorable.

Lord Chesterfield having on a certain occasion respectfully remonstrated against an appointment which George II. wished to make, the King, enraged, exclaimed: "Vell, appoint a teffil if you like." "As your Majesty pleases," replied Chesterfield: "and shall the instrument be filled up in the usual way: "To our right trusty, well-beloved cousin and counsellor!"

Ben Butler's Plan of Battle.

Ex-Governor Butler has mapped out the plan of his campaign. He will make his big fight in New York state, because he considers that the weak spot of both Cleveland and Blaine. To his intimate friends, the old warrior is very frank. His letter of acceptance will be a ringing document, so plainly written that the most ignorant cannot go astray. On all the issues of the day he will take sides against both of the great parties. The "republican corruptionists," as he terms them, will be unmercifully scathed, and he will argue that its leaders have been false to all its principles. The democrats will be shown to be weak and vacillating, afraid to take a decided stand on the tariff question, and juggling words to secure democratic voters. He will argue that the working-men, the bone and sinew of the democrats, have not been fairly treated, and that they have no reason to hope for anything but promises in the future. There is no doubt that Butler has gone in the presidential race to stay. He is not as sanguine as his friends. He says he does not care who is defeated, but his mission at present is to show the bread-winners of this country that they are not justly used. "The voters can do as they please," he says. "If they vote for me, all right. If they vote for my opponents, all right. I shall manage my campaign in my own way, and pay my own bills. That is all there is about it. General Butler's plan is to put in his best work in New York City and State. He will soon get to work and organize Butler clubs. The bulk of his money will be spent in New York. If he does this, there can be but one result—the defeat of Cleveland. In Massachusetts Butler is strong, and will poll a very large vote. He will have little trouble in effecting a good organization there. In Michigan he has also considerable strength and he will work hard in that state to poll a large vote. 'Butler's first blow,' said an intimate friend of his to-day, 'will be struck in New York state, and will be heard all over the Union.'

"Does he count on Kelly's support?"

"To an extent, yes. But there is no doubt that Tammany will ratify Cleveland's nomination. Still, I think Butler will get the votes."

"Has Butler an idea the election will be thrown into the house?"

"No. He says that is visionary."

"Who does he think will be elected?"

"I am not at liberty to say."

"What is Butler's object in running?"

"To get a new party in the field for '88. If he succeeds, look out for squalls. Butler is a dangerous man to fool with, and both democrates and republicans know it."

Speaking of Butler, he got off a good thing the other day on the editor of the Boston Herald. The latter employed the not unfamiliar phrase a "tinker's dam," in alluding to the General's canvass, and wishing to soften the term, he called it "a tinker's malediction." But the two dams are not synonyms, as Butler points out:—

"The editor of the Herald does not seem to know enough to be wicked when he wants to be. He closes an article upon your humble servant in the Herald of Sunday as follows: 'Can anybody believe that a man with his record cares a tinker's malediction for the principles of any party?' Now, he evidently thinks that a 'tinker's dam' is a cuss word. Will you inform him that in the olden time, when travelling tinkers went about the country mending the holes in the tin kettles and pans, he frequently found one that was ragged and rusty, so that the soldering iron would not take, and he was obliged to fill it up with a mass of solder. To keep that solder in mass over the whole while in the melted state, he was accustomed to take some crumbs of bread and moisten them and make a little ridge round the hole with his moistened crumbs, to hold the solder in its place as he melted it in. This was what was called a 'tinker's dam,' which he brushed away after he had finished, as it was utterly useless. So that our Pilgrim fathers used the words 'not worth a tinker's dam,' never dreaming that they were profane. The editor of the Herald evidently thinks he has been swearing all his life, when he hasn't, and that he must soften the word down to 'malediction.'

Yours truly,
BENJAMIN F. BUTLER.

A new device promises to bring joy to the deaf. It consists of a contrivance which can be located in the handle of a cane, umbrella, parasol, or fan, and which, when placed to the ear of a deaf person, will cause him or her to hear any sound audible to the ear of a person who is not afflicted with deafness. The device which produces these effects is a tube about six inches long placed in the hollow of a Malacca cane. In the tube is a cone-shaped electric coil beginning at a small battery at the lower end of the tube and terminating in the bird's bill. The vibration of this coil causes a multiplication of any sound or noise passing into the tube through the several slits in the side of the cane. The cane and tube together weigh about six ounces, and the whole outfit looked like an ordinary Malacca walking stick with a silver head. It is simply a multiplication table based on sound, and it accomplishes what nothing else has ever done.

The Department of Agriculture, investigating the cattle disease in the Western States, has received positive intelligence that Wyoming is not clear of infectious diseases. Secretary Sturgis, of the Wyoming Stock Association, has notified the Governor of Montana that cattle from the southern ranches of Texas, infected with Texan fever, are in Wyoming on their way to Montana. Mr. Sturgis says the cattle along the trails followed by the northward moving herds have in a number of cases taken the disease.

Contrary to expectations, when the returns continued to come to hand from the Westmoreland Scott Act election, they reduced the majority against the repeal of the Act to 32. At 10 o'clock on Thursday, the vote stood with a majority of 14 in favor of repeal and considerable excitement prevailed. Nothing further could be obtained till Friday afternoon, when all places were heard from and the final showing is said to give a total majority against repeal of 38

The Peace of Europe.

VIENNA, Aug. 18.

The Montagh Revue, referring to the meeting between Counts Kalnoky, the Austrian Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Prince Bismarck, dwells upon the universally peaceful aspect of affairs. The Austro-German Alliance, it says, removes all chance of rupture of peace. Russia is equally as anxious with Austria to adhere to Prince Bismarck's policy. The separation of Italy from the three empires, is merely owing to a technical financial question, and does not imply a lasting estrangement.

Breach of Treaty by the French.

LONDON, Aug. 18.

The Times Shanghai correspondent, referring to the protest against French action by the Minister of Foreign Affairs, says it deplores the French refusal of American mediation, and denies China is guilty of a breach of the Fournier convention, but accuses the French of having been guilty of many breaches thereof. The protest adds that China desires to submit her cause to the judgment of Europe, hoping thereby that a settlement of pending difficulties may be discovered.
